Editorial!

Hello again.

Well, Edition 7 is being snapped up by concerned puppies all over Australia. Letters of appreciation and subscriptions have been flowing in. Even though you might have received a complementary copy of Edition 7 or Edition 8, if you like what you read and want to keep receiving it, please fill out the subscription form on page 61 or phone through your Bankcard details.

I must apologise if this editorial seems like it was done on the run, but I have been hounded by the "gutter press" for interviews and have had hours of photographic sessions.

I'm not doing any more and I'm trying to remain "in communicado", as they always pick the worst photo of me to print and sensationalize every comment out of context. These "Clark Kent" news hounds cannot see the major point; the political parties have to see that point, that they can never disarm the public and they have far more deadly equipment at their disposal which is impossible for them to confiscate. They want to ban Daisy BB guns and have already banned catapults. Are they going to ban petrol, glycerine, condies crystals and household sugar? They already ban books retrospectively after they have been imported, and then charge the unsuspecting customer with importing "prohibited goods". This is morally wrong and has recently cost one of our readers $4000 for Mastercarding his gun books from the U.S.A. Every day shooters somewhere are having their property confiscated or their livelihood taken off them illegally. You can bet when they ask about their rights to their lawyers they will hear that famous cliché, "there is no justice". So leave old Guy Fawkes alone because he got none, and neither does the system deserve any either.

When you observe the misrepresentation of Lock Stock and Barrel by the main stream media, what credibility do they have on any other subject like human relations, education, regionalization of councils, centralization of government power and defence? The news hounds didn't mention that they read through the history of the New World Order and, in passing, overlooked the fact that half of Australia has had it so tough that they are preparing for a revolution. This must not be newsworthy or interesting to the other half.

Maybe their Editor's a mongrel bitch who doesn't appreciate militant feminist jokes. They condemn us for selling dangerous equipment, but what moral standing do they have when they take advertisements from the National Bank, Westpac and Commonwealth Banks? Now they are dangerous! Did anybody notice that our Hills Swing Sets were $27.00 cheaper than the ones in the Sunday Mail? No wonder she was bitchy!

Pro-firearm groups who feel that being apolitical in itself has shown to have strength in hitting the issue and not the politician are kidding themselves and wasting resources that can be used to insert red hot electoral pokers into anti-gun anti-Australian politicians' intestines.

These wishy washy fence sitters don't know what the issues are. Maybe when they wake up to the facts that all main stream political parties have been infiltrated by an illegal foreign secret society whose main aim is the destruction of Australia's sovereignty, standard of living, independence, defence, moral values and is committed 100% to the complete military and civilian disarmament. They have put these aims into force without consulting the Australian people, and at the same time are conducting psychological warfare facilitated by the emergence of mass media and the transformation of Australian education by behavioural psychologists and social scientists.

Bertrand Russell, a top line British Fabian, let the cat out of the bag in his book "The Impact of Science on Society" when he said: "I think the subject which will of most importance politically is mass psychology. Its importance has been enormously increased by the growth of modern methods of propaganda. Although this science will be diligently studied, it will be rigidly confined to the governing class. The populace will not be allowed to know how its convictions were generated." These are the issues. We have traitors running our Federal and State Governments on a scale not seen since the Petain {Quisling} Government of France in World War 2. If anybody out there still thinks we are a sovereign nation go straight to your local politician's office and get a copy of the "Lima Declaration" March 1975. Look at No. 27 and read how your industry and farms were sold out.

For 20 years now the shooters have been trying to get the facts over to the main line political parties, and in true style the media have constantly obstructed the truth at every opportunity. Some readers by now ask, "Why?" Is it because they all get Socialist indoctrination when they went to University? Is it because Goss, Downey, and Carne, Wayne Goss' legal firm, is trustee for the Australian Journalist Association? Or are they all working for the same boss, both politicians and journalists?

When you hear some middle-of-the-road shooter, who wouldn't step off the white line to get a free pass to kick Keating in the goolies, moaning, "Why don't we try to get on side with these politicians, give them the facts and bring them round to reality?" Well for the last 12 years good men like Carl Vandel, Bob Doring, Malcolm Bone, Steve Watson, Ron Owen, Ted Dey, Tony Pitt, and now Owen Dare have been socking thousands of submissions to parliamentarians. Ask those freedom fighters, they will all tell you the same thing. The politicians know all the facts already they have a vast supply of research flunkies to equip them with the same facts as we supply to them. But it's the political policy that dictates what happens, and until we break this political agenda that both sides have we won't have any success.

So it's gloves off and into it with every tool or breath we have in us, because the real worry is what their next move will be after they think they have all the guns. Maybe the old Guy Fawkes recipes might get re-read.

South Australia

The new South Australian gun laws are only another tool of these traitors, like a hammer to nail us in our box.

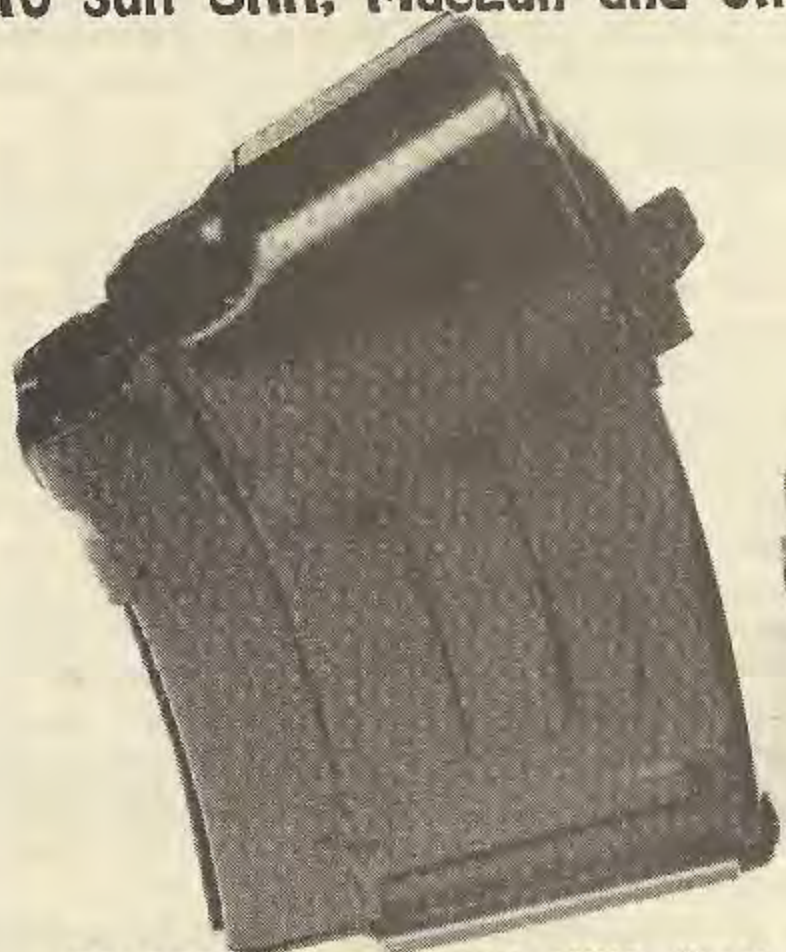

Quote: sale, purchase and possession of ammunition includes primers, cases, propellant, projectiles and any other components. Reloading equipment has also been mentioned. Air guns include a pop-gun and water pistol. Edition 1 Lock Stock & Barrel 1981 had a cartoon of the firearm for the 1990s. It was a pop gun. We all laughed, but now it looks like the planned national gun laws are going to move pop guns onto the National Gun Register, which is planned to be introduced in February 1993.

Remember, registration always precedes confiscation.

If you have to register your guns because you have a shooters licence, and if you don't have a firearm you wouldn't want a shooters license would you, make sure you have an old klunker or an old receiver [I'm sure Owen Guns Parts Division can sell them for about $20.00]. Anything with a serial number. Even the thought of handing in a receiver is depressing, but think of the alternatives. Shotguns worth thousands of dollars don't mean a thing to these militant anti-gun coalition feminists. They are proposing another "gradualism", local armories. As soon as all those eggs are in one basket the criminals will start blowing the doors off them, and our lords and masters will say, "Oh well, if you cannot look after them, into the furnace they go." continued page 59

NEW WORLD ORDER part 2

by Ron Owen

We will follow the Rothschild/Milner round table tentacle in one of the future editions. At this stage it is more important to discuss the "Fabians", as in this example of one of the tentacles we can start from the speech of the then Prime Minister, R.J. Hawke [Bob], at the Centenary Dinner, of the Fabian Society, Melbourne, 18th May, 1984. We than can trace it back past a hundred years through Karl Marx, League of the Just, to Adam Weishaupt's Illuminati. In this way we can prove that there is not just a link but an organised semi- secret society that has been power broking behind the political parties for 200 years. In Bob Hawke's speech on the Fabians' 100 year anniversary, besides saluting Fabians' strategy of "gradualism" and the party old stagers such as Tom Hann, Harold Laski, and Bertrand Russell, he mentions, quote, "But in 1947 was also a year when the challenge against bank nationalisation forced on us a realisation of the restrictions and restraints imposed by the constitution, and in particular by Section 92. Consequently, this led to a rethinking of our approach. Because, unless the platform was just to stagnate into irrelevance, the search had to be made for alternative means of achieving our objectives. In that search that went for 20 years Fabians were in the forefront, Fabians like Frank Crean, Jim Cairns, Kim Beasley, Race Matthew, and not least our own fabius maximus - Gough Whitlam himself."

Is this an admission of a group subverting the constitution? He later acknowledges "the debt of my own government to Fabianism."

Where did Fabianism come from?

Quote from Encyclopaedia Britannia page 647:

Fabian Society, Socialist society founded in 1883-84. The name of the society is derived from the Roman general whose patient and elusive tactics in avoiding pitched battles secured his ultimate victory over stronger forces. Its founding is attributed to Thomas Davidson and its early members included George Bernard Shaw, Sydney Webb, Annie Besant, Edward Pease, and Graham Wallas. Shaw and Webb later joined by Beatrice Potter-Webb, Webb's wife, were the outstanding leaders of the Society for many years.

The Fabians at first attempted to permeate the liberal and conservative parties with socialist ideas and helped form the Labour Party. At their first meeting they adopted the 10 points of communism from Karl Marx's Communist Manifesto

1. Abolition of property in land and application of all rents of land to public purposes.
2. A heavy progressive or graduated income tax.
3. Abolition of all right of inheritance.
4. Confiscation of the property of all emigrants and rebels.
5. Centralisation of credit in the hands of the state, by means of a national bank with state capital and an exclusive monopoly.
6. Centralisation of the means of communication and transport in the hands of the state.
7. Extension of factories and instruments of production owned by the state, the bringing into cultivation of waste lands, and the improvement of the soil generally in accordance with a common plan.
8. Equal liability of all labour. Establishment of industrial armies, especially for agriculture.

9. Combination of agriculture with manufacturing industries, gradual abolition of the distinction between town and country, by a more equable distribution of the population over the country.

10. Free education for all children in public schools. Abolition of children's factory labour in its present form. Combination of education with industrial production, etc, etc.

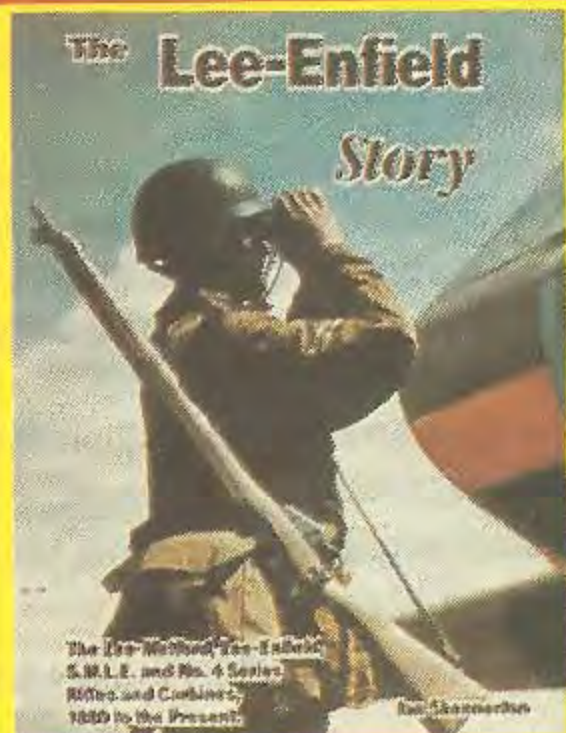

They obviously accepted Marx's revulsion of Christianity, which the rest of his Manifesto concentrates on but, when it suited them, they would criticise Communism and Karl Marx, as they would never let the truth get in the way of their aims.

Most people would recognise these 10 points as very similar to the aims of the Illuminati as featured in Edition 7, which were written 100 years before the

REVOLUTION IN

The media and government response to the last edition of Lock, Stock and Barrel proved that a percentage of the people [government, Labor lawyers and media] do not want to tell half the population that the other half has been so down trodden and exploited it is preparing for civil war or worse.

We have a situation where the media cotton wools reality and sensationalises trivia to supply soma to the people it perceives as being the "norm" and ignore's the other half who are waiting for the government to fire the first shot. My attempts to attract attention to this dilemma were completely ignored and although the magazine suffered massive character bashing from the media it dramatically increased our readership. One of a few different things are going to happen. I will try to give warning to the government to back off, and I will try and give the best information to the people for their future defence but, most important, readers are going to take action to avert this fictitious scenario from ever occurring in reality. Now let's return to the unhappy republic of Apathralia where the people are still suffering under the dictatorial, democratic, collaborationist government which owes allegiance to a foreign power "The New World Order". Last edition we discussed some elementary principles of guerrilla organisation as that was the most pressing message that needed discussion immediately. We will return to guerrilla organisation in later editions as at this stage we urgently need to discuss the following.

The Organisation and Operation of a Civilian Resistance Group.

As guerilla and resistance strategy is related in the same goal and complement each other, communication between them should be very

JOIN THE A.U.S.I. FREEDOM SCOUTS LET NO QUARTER BE GIVEN

Do not kid yourselves about what is at stake. Your career, your property, your material wealth, your status among family and friends, your freedom from incarceration and even your life are at risk if you are willing to defend yourself from this crime perpetrated upon us by a malignant government.

The principles of honour, loyalty and courage are scoffed at and viewed as romantic nonsense.

Keep in mind that those principles created this great Nation. We owe no apology for that success. If you speak of rights, of the legitimacy of national and cultural continuity and dominance, you like me, will be labeled a fanatic, a racist, an extremist, a radical and even a terrorist. Your phone will be tapped, your name will be listed in the files of intelligence and enforcement agencies.

The socialist vomit being fed to our children in the public schools, corrupt politicians, abusive police and government officials, distorted media reporting the rape of our land, the poisoning of our water and air, the strangulation of free enterprise by megabusiness, the insanity of affirmative action and the arrest and prosecution of citizens for self defence are the same rabble who will take your rights, confiscate your weapons and castrate your spirit.

TAKE OUR WEAPONS AND WE WILL TAKE YOUR LIFE

TAKE WARNING, the line has been drawn. If blood is to be shed, let it begin here. Should the flames and violence consume us, history will mark for future generations the courage and passing of free men. If the Almighty grants an undeserving people mercy once again before the light flickers into darkness, free men and women will take their weapons in hand, place the point of the sword against the throat of the enemy and no quarter shall be given.

minimal until the day arrives when a general uprising can be organised. They should be separate for security reasons [as will be explained] and the strategy and training is different.

---- Missions ----

1. Maintain strong belief in final victory.
2. Inform the population concerning appropriate behaviour toward the enemy.
3. Collect and conceal weapons and ammunition for the moment when, together with the guerilla unit, an open uprising can be staged. This will usually coincide with the approaching collapse of the enemy.
4. Develop an intelligence service which will assist guerilla units.
5. Maintain a list of all atrocities committed by each official of the oppressors for the "day for settling accounts "
"Justice day". [Posters, leaflets and rumours, you have to make sure that everybody, even the enemy, knows about this. This knowledge will keep many an official from extreme action on helpless civilians]
6. Publish a free newspaper.[Underground]
7. Broadcast radio programs. [Freedom transmitter]
8. Establish an organisation to hide persons sought by the enemy police or security services.
9. Establish an escape and evasion net for escaped prisoners or resistance members whose cover is blown.
10. Falsify identity cards or other enemy documentation.
11. Counterfeit money.[They do it, why shouldn't we]
12. Fight against collaboration.[Apathralians fraternising with the enemy.]
13. Organise sabotage.
14. Organise attempts against the lives of especially cruel officials of the enemy.

15. Train underground fighting sections for the day of a general uprising.

Collaboration Curve

A very small percentage of the population will collaborate with the enemy. This will increase sharply right after the resistance commences and the enemy introduces inconvenient controls on total population in attempts to combat the resistance movement. It will then remain constant and after a while will decrease. Our quisling government will make plenty of mistakes as the resistance exploits them. The collaboration curve will decline further, desperation on their part will then lead them to terrorise the population with forced labor, excessive work expectations, curfews, breach of liberties, arrest without excuse or trial, forced requisitions of property, hostages, firing squads and over bearing behaviour. All of this will stop collaboration and increase the support for the resistance, provocation must stop "gradualism" which is the enemies best and only weapon.

Recruiting for the Resistance

In spite of all their good intentions, not all people are suitable to be active in the resistance. You have to select very carefully. The success or failure of the resistance movement depends on how good this selection is.

Well! Was mine the most talked about article in Edition 7 or what? Most people obviously missed the point by light years of space. Maybe it has to be as pointed as Mt Kosciuszko, these recipes are here only to impress the politicians and benevolent bureaucrats that it is impossible to disarm the general public unless they ban household sugar, flour and vitamin C. As in South Australia, when the government wants to restrict the sale of smokeless powder, primers and all components, they are forcing the public into a situation where they will make their own. So if there has to be any moralising, the governments of Australia are the force which will push people into home manufacturing. It is a decision that they have taken and they stand at the crossroads. It is not too late for them to return to commonsense. If their next move is to ban the information, they have to consider that some of the recipes such as in the last edition have been around for 650 years, and the titles with this information in it number in hundreds of thousands. It would be amusing to watch the governments attempt to gather up all the Encyclopaedia Britannicas or place advertisements recalling volume's 8, 13, 22, and 23.

Let us get into the warnings again as most newspapers did not mention that they existed.

Warnings. Read this!

1. If you ever feel slightly inclined to play with any explosive chemicals,
 - A. Find a chemistry course and do it.
 - B. Find a powder monkeys course and do that.

Do not under any circumstances try any recipes in this magazine.
2. Using explosives of any type is deadly dangerous making explosives is triple-deadly dangerous.
3. Messing with explosives is not just dangerous for yourself but everybody in your vicinity.
4. None of these recipes have been tested or are being suggested. They are only for discussion with politicians and militant women feminists.
5. Do not read these warnings and think this is for the other guy. They are for you. It is your eyes and body and your life that you throw away.

Inspiration

These days you hear people criticising Yugoslavians, making jokes about how they just like fighting. If some research was done by these critics they would appreciate that the causes for all this bloodshed is centuries of oppression, either from Turkey, Germany, Greece, Austria or Communism. The one thing I respect about all sides in this Balkan nightmare is their burning desire to be free and independent from everyone. I visited that country once and a small bank building was pointed out to me where the men of the town had manufactured ammunition and explosives under the direction of the town's school teacher. This enterprise had armed the guerillas in this area and they removed the Germans from this area of Yugoslavia. This area was called Privi Partizan [Privi means first] and was the first area in World War Two to be regained from German occupation. Until that time Germany, Hitler's "New World Order", had never suffered a defeat or a retreat before. This was accomplished by independent citizens who had at that time had no external assistance from the allies because at that time they were too busy retreating themselves. Unfortunately the leader of those guerillas who were so successful was Tito who, eventually, was in to suppression of his own. So there's some inspiration. Their assistance came from the knowledge that was in the hands of the teacher. Let us make sure that the knowledge is never forgotten, that it is retained unused unless oppression leaves the people with no other alternative.

Modern Explosives

A modern chemical explosive contains its own oxygen supply and some substance that can be easily burned. All chemical explosives can be divided into two classes; high and low. High explosives decompose with higher reaction rates and consequently, high pressure. Low explosives burn far slower by comparison and thus develop far lower pressure. They produce a propelling or throwing force. Smokeless powder is a propellant and is as such a low explosive but high pressure is obtained as it is enclosed in a chamber, so never underestimate it.

The Preparation of Smokeless Powder

1. In an acid-resistant container place 2 parts by volume nitric acid and 1 part by volume sulfuric acid.

2. Cellulose plastic wood called wood putty is pure cellulose with a solvent. Leave the top off and let the solvent evaporate and the putty will go hard then. By any means, pulverise into dust with a coffee grinder or vitamiser.

3. Add 1 cup of the powdered cellulose to the acid mix and allow it to soak for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally.

4. Dump the mixture into 1 gallon of clean water, filter out the powder and let dry.

5. To purify:

a. Add as much acetone to the powder as needed to dissolve most of it.

b. Filter out and discard insoluble matter.

c. Dump solution into 1 gallon of clean water and filter out the crystals that precipitate.

d. Dry the crystals and store in a closed jar in a cool place.

6. Test very carefully with wimp loads fired with a long piece of string, increase until satisfied. Use a chronograph if you have one to check velocity. Watch pressure signs on cases after each shot.

Another procedure used is to boil high quality cotton for half an hour. In a 2% solution of sodium hydroxide, wash it in hot water and allow it to dry. Next, 250cc of concentrated sulphuric acid, 150cc of concentrated nitric acid, and 20cc of water is mixed together and kept cool at a temperature of 25 degrees C.

The next step is to place the treated cotton in the acid mixture and stir well with a porcelain or other non-corrosive rod. This is to be done for 35 minutes. After nitration, the acids are washed out and the cotton is washed in boiling water for 5 separate washings of twenty minutes each, or 100 minutes in total. This treatment should completely remove the acids, but the litmus test will give you a final indication. If the test indicates that acid is still present, then a washing in a 2% solution of sodium bicarbonate should do the job. In this preparation, as well as the others, removal of all acid is of the gravest importance. This is because the more acid present as an impurity in an explosive, the more unstable the explosive. Filter out and let dry slowly. Dissolve in alcohol-ether mixture then filter and let dry thinly on flat sheets of material. When it dries, it should be in small flakes.

Test as in first procedure.

Yours explosively,

Guy Fawkes

HOW TO STOP YOUR GUN MACHINE GUNNING

Stirling Model 20

The trusty Stirling Model 20, shooters either love them or leave them. It might be quite safe to say there are millions of these rifles in Australia today and every working day hundreds would be carried out of gunshops by a happy new owner. Although they are often unreliable, if tuned correctly they can be very accurate and, if you can understand how they work and maintain them adequately, they will give good service. I have found that they rarely give trouble-free out-of-the-box reliability; some jam, some machine gun, some won't fire at all and some very few are perfect. Value for money is still there even if they don't work as they are so simple and basic to repair. The parts are worth the $140.00 they cost new so don't complain. When they machine gun as new straight from the box it is because the small wire pin just forward of the trigger has been set too low, and this lets the trigger move too far down. This allows the firing pin to slip over the sear and detonate the cartridge without the trigger being pulled. The simple way to fix this of course is to insert a small punch through the trigger recess in the housing and bend the pin upwards a small amount. This stops the trigger coming down too low.

To stop the screw turning, which causes machine gunning, a lock nut should be fitted to this screw.

Now another common problem with the Model 20 Stirling is that the trigger has no adjustment screws, and sometimes the trigger pressure and travel adjustments are just wild. So thousands of budding gunsmiths have experimented with this rifle's problem. Of course one of the first things they wish to control is trigger backlash.

They fix a nut into the recess in the trigger housing and insert a screw with a lock nut so that they can precisely set the drop of the trigger bar. Unfortunately they either set it too high then the trigger won't lower the sear far enough to release the firing pin. The second mistake is, if they set the screw down too far, it will allow the trigger to be pulled too far back. The sear would then be too low and, even though it would fire the first shot, once the trigger is too far down the sear won't catch the firing pin at all and the loaded round would be left in the chamber. And, of course, the third mistake is if the trigger is set lower than where the wire pin was by just a fraction, the trigger will be pulled back to a position each time where the sear just catches the firing pin. When the round enters the chamber and the bolt strikes the barrel this is enough inertia to make the sear slip on the firing pin. This immediately fires the round and causes the process to repeat until the trigger is released or the magazine is empty.

With the Stirling magazine being only 15 or 30 rounds, this does not take very long, as the rate of fire is approximately 1200 rounds per minute. This is caused by the bolt being too light and if the return spring was heavier it would make cocking the rifle too difficult.

If you purchase a Stirling with this problem just turn the screw clockwise until it works normally and you will perceive an improved trigger pull and your local gunshop owner will notice a drop in 22 ammo sales from your direction. Next edition we will feature another type and model. If you are concerned that your rifle will be missed out drop us a letter and we will make sure it is featured soon.

PREVIEW OF A PROTOTYPE

by Ron Owen

THE IDEA

The story of this "odd" looking rifle started some eighteen months ago. I was in the Peoples Republic of China on a buying trip to organise a few containers of rifles and ammunition. It was a Sunday and I had taken some time to visit a military museum with a Chinese friend from the corporation I was buying from.

We had been very busy looking at their extensive Luger collection, and had been discussing the marketing prospects of manufacturing a copy to sell mainly to the United States market. When we had seen everything twice over and we stood on the street outside devouring a roast potato in the skin that had cost next to nothing. It was crossing my mind that if it was infected, how much might it cost me in medical bills. My friend, always aware of my concerns, kept reassuring me that all the "bad" would have died in the street vendor's brazier.

I think around about that time I noticed the familiar T.V. camera on the lamp post looking down on the throng of moving people, and this made me think of the recent government controls in Australia. Like most Australians or "Westerners" I liked to point out the advantages of our democratic freedom. My Chinese friend then pointed out that with the banning of the import of semi-autos to Australia and the new freedom of commerce in China, we were moving closer from opposite ends to the same system. The frustration of this idea made me think of how best to import to Australia a reliable rifle in 7.62x39 calibre which would sell in the same price range as the S.K.K. which had been so popular.

in non-critical places so that the original numbers can be ground off and replaced with matching numbers to suit the factory refitted one. These are all repolished, re-headspaced and reblued in several army refitting factories in China. Most of these army refitting factories bought their barrels in from the bigger rifle-producing factories in other parts of China.

The Chinese have millions of used S.K.S. rifles that they are gradually pulling out of service and replacing with AK84s. They prefer to recondition them rather than to sell them in surplus condition as it supplies work for people who, as good Communists, if there is no work they just sit down at the side of their machines and do nothing. They get paid anyway and cannot get laid off. The problems with this system are counted in hundreds but the main one as far as we are concerned is although the corporation's management are well indoctrinated Communists and will work hard for their beliefs in Communism, the factory management are not too interested except in fancy banquets, eating anything that moves on the planet and chain smoking. The tradesmen who can turn their hand to any machine (equivalent to our toolmaker) are few and far between. Most machinists only work their personal machine, and in the main are women, who turn out a fair job when production commences.

Research and development in firearms is just about non-existent. There is one Chinese gun designer of note, he designed the type 63, the type 73, and the type 86. He did a Valmet Sporter version of the Type 73, which has a two-piece piston similar to the S.K.S., but having

Our prototype, as yet un-named.

If the Chinese manufactured a new rifle out of new parts the price would not be in that price bracket. The only way the S.K.K. was able to be produced for that price was because it was made from reconditioned S.K.S. parts. 99% of Australian shooters considered their S.K.K. brand new, but every one of them was made from second-hand receivers and moving parts.

The existing barrels and stocks are replaced with new ones, and all parts are then freshly serial numbered a revolving bolt like the A.K. He designed the Ememi 310 rifle, which shares a few similarities with the Tikka rifle, and I presume he works in one of the Chungqing factories. I have tried to get to meet him but am told he speaks no English and is very old and not available for visitations. His name is Tang Wen Li.

THE INITIAL APPROACH

By the time I had finished the baked potato, I had visualised an S.K.S. straight-pull rifle which, if the concept was radically different, would not fall under the section of the new Customs Act, where it mentions parts of semi-automatic rifles. If too many parts stayed the same the Federal Police would consider it was just an S.K.S. without the activating piston. The Chinese are concerned that the American market will be closed to them, as semi-automatics are their biggest business and they are scared the U.S. Government will stop their export to there as well. So it didn't take long for my Chinese friend to see the value of having alternatives to sell.

We caught a taxi back to my hotel and he phoned his boss, who has god-like powers [anybody who can even make a decision in China has god-like powers, never mind making anything out of the ordinary happen]. "Check out of that 5-star hotel in the morning and check into a 2-star hotel near to the factory" was the command. Where is this factory? "In this city, was the reply". "Why can't I stay here?", I said. "It is one and half hours away by car in a military district" says my friend. Next morning at 7am I'm checking out of a paradisiacal palace where my only danger was getting glass in my ice cream (that's another story from a previous trip); at 9am I'm checking in at The Dragon. The rooms were clean and the heating was working; I hoped the food was edible. At 9.30 am we were in the factory's visiting rooms sipping Chinese tea while my corporation guys were persuading the factory management that a bit of R. & D. might be good for their political survival in the dog-eat-dog world (literally) of factory management. I was sitting back listening to the management guys saying it was impossible; they didn't make barrels, they couldn't afford to take 3 months to make a pattern, they had never made a different rifle before. The excuses lasted till lunch time and after fifteen or so courses and five million cigarettes were consumed they agreed to give it a go for a week, but doubted that it would work.

A RIFLE IS BORN

The main idea to make it different was to enclose the receiver, so that the rifle could be equipped with a top mounted scope. Side mount aesthetics are awful, and also create too much leverage between the scope and the receiver. The only way I could express this idea to my workmen helpers was to weld a back cover on to the front of an S.K.S. receiver. This was a little too high for practical scope mounting, but served as an example as how the end product should look. Of course the cocking handle had to be machined off and replaced with a turned, threaded handle which could be removed to enable disassembly for cleaning. The top right side had to be milled out to make room for the ejection port.

Initially the clip charger guide had to be removed and a hole drilled and tapped in the bolt carrier for the removable cocking handle. The return spring guide hole had to be blocked to allow this hole to go into this recess. The return spring itself had to be shortened to allow the receiver to return to battery. As you will notice from the

photo a recoil lug was welded to the rear of the receiver which enables the barrel to be free floated, as this gives a firm position to attach a king screw to. The other side of the welded block serves as a forward pivot catch for the five shot magazine. This was made for experimental purposes out of some parts of the drop box mag and base plate of a five shot AK mag.

I talked myself hoarse trying to explain that the receiver would have to be heat-treated for safety pressure considerations, but they said it would be stronger now than before and thought it unimportant. I showed them how to civilianise the trigger guard and grind down a radius on the rear of the hammer to allow smoother extraction and retraction of the bolt. The bolt was made to 'hold back' after the last shot in the magazine had been fired by manufacturing a lifter on the rear of the magazine follower. This enables the magazine to be loaded but the bolt remains open and safe until the cocking handle is pulled to the rear a quarter of an inch. This disengages the bolt hold open catch and allows the bolt, by means of the return spring, to put the first round into battery in the chamber. After the round is fired, and as this rifle is a straight pull, the cocking handle has to be pulled to the rear as far as it can go to cycle, extract, eject, pick up and load the chamber.

The problems of communicating these messages to the tradesman who spoke not one word of English, though an interpreter who would not know what a screwdriver was used for, was very straining and time consuming, with lots of "mud maps" drawn on the floor. But when I tried to explain the importance of scope mounting bases being parallel to the rifle barrel on a vertical and horizontal plain I knew I was pushing my luck. These good engineers had never seen a scoped rifle, even though the Chinese manufacture Draganovs and have factories manufacturing scopes, my guys had never seen one in action. They had spotting scopes on their indoor range and kept bringing one in to show me, but putting the two things together was a new ball game.

They showed me an excellent collimator for open rifle sights with very finely made bore studs. I placed one of these in the barrel and used it to find a centre line at the muzzle with a vernier scribe on a surface plate and transposed it onto the top of the receiver and drew a centre line on the top cover we had welded on. This broke through a few mental barriers and we milled up some reasonable copies of Weaver bases. My interpreter friend returned to the museum we had visited and begged borrowed or stole a telescopic sight. Meanwhile I visited another part of the factory and tried to inspire the manager to help me make a stock. He said maybe when the drawings and patterns are finished we will have one made in four months or so. He laughed as I produced the carton of Marlboro "Red" and said I could try if I wanted to waste my time [maybe it was the red packet that appealed to his political sympathies].

I got one of his men to take me to the timber stack where there was a pile of chu (local timber) about 40 ft high. But behind it was a smaller stack of smaller pieces, and it was walnut! I could tell the grade was low, but I had been looking for walnut in China for years, and it is rather difficult when they cannot understand what you are talking about. So we started hand-making a stock. I needed a high cheekpiece to suit the high mounted scope, so I designed a target-type stock for this experiment. I showed the guys on the machines that I wanted it planed on two sides, marked it out, and had the profile cut out, inletted the receiver and barrel channel and inletted the trigger pack. This sounds all so simple and quick, but took a lot of time and communicating skills. After I rasped out the basic shape the bosses as usual said "4.00 pm, it's time to go home", and they took me back to my hotel. However two of the guys stayed back and finished the stock shaping and sanding that night.

After four days of my pushing they had seen something very different to an AK or an SKS created and wanted to see how well it shot. After the stock and telescopic sight were fitted we were off to the 100 metre indoor rifle range which was bricked in, hence no wind and perfect light. Maybe it wouldn't be so bad living in China. As we only had a second-hand barrel for our experiment the gas port was still open, so a large sleeve was put over it to stop the gas throwing dirt in our faces, I was concerned that it would decrease accuracy. We fired from a fixed rifle rest and viewed a TV video monitor (only black +white) - life's a bitch. As the screens were graduated in millimetres I had no grasp of scale but I could observe with my eyes a hole appearing, suggesting that a group was hanging together nicely. When they went down range after 10 of my shots. I was pleased to note that the group was just about an eighth over the inch. I never go down range in China and my adrenalin flows constantly because Chinese range procedure is non-existent. If anyone was hurt they would only shrug and assess it as a dangerous hobby and such risks have to be accepted. My group of helpers and the bosses put a few hundred rounds down the range and organised a guy with a video to take their photo while they were shooting.

Then we were off to another fifteen course lunch to discuss the pricing structure. Millions of cigarettes later and after a local zoo had been consumed, a selling price of approx 400 Australian dollars was settled on. They promised to send me another sample to report on so that production could be organised. We agreed to manufacture the stocks for them and they would supply all the metal parts.

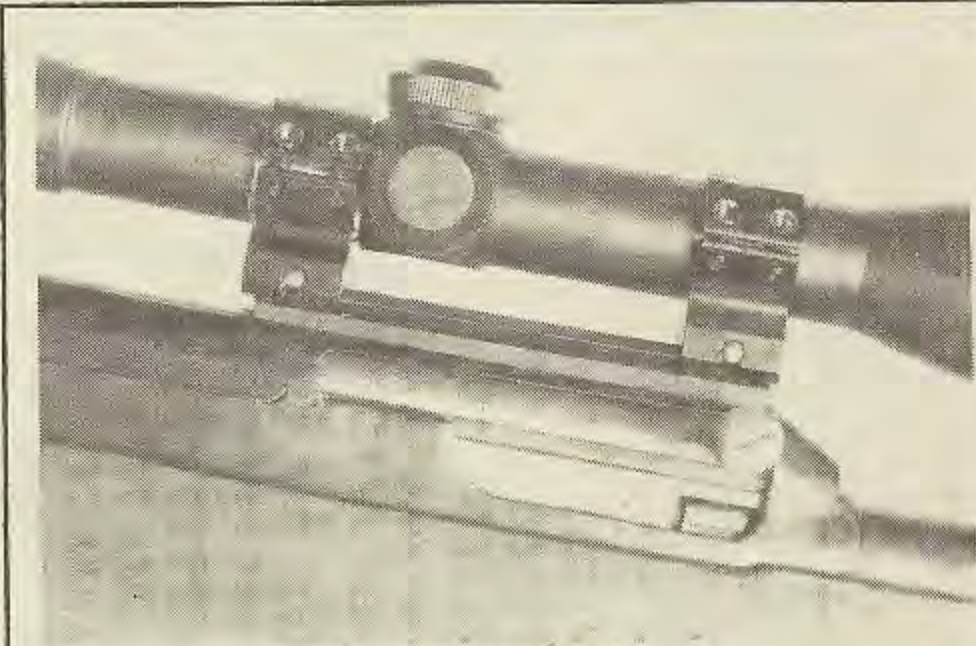

When this rifle is ready for the Australian market it will be a light sporter suitable for wild pigs, goats and roos. It will not be as fast to use as a semi-auto but will be much faster than bolt and lever rifles. Lets hope we can still own them by the time this rifle is ready.

Recoil lug at front of receiver doubles as main action screw mount.

In the Eighth Century AD, just before King Alfred the Great burnt his cakes, Britain was continually threatened by the Danes. A series of weak kings had hit on the idea of every spring, as the Danish long boats approached the British coast, they would take a large amount of gold pieces out to them and buy them off for the raiding season. This money was called Danegeld. Of course the Danes didn't mind this trouble-free plunder and went raiding in France, Ireland and Belgium, where they were not as well-organised; stopping over in Sweden to buy new swords and axes, as their iron work has been famous for a long time.

This deal was very satisfactory for the British bureaucrats and the Danes, but the British working class had to produce this money as tax of 10% of there wealth, and more than likely all of this Danegeld didn't end up with the Danes. Some of it you could be sure stuck on jammy fingers. They also had to put up with Danes landing and lording it over them, spending money on British girls, raping the ladies and doing worse to men and horses. So then Alfred came along and showed a lot of "bottle". He told the Danes the aid for third rate nations wasn't coming any more, and with the common people's aid he gave the Danes a whipping so good that they didn't want to come back for any more.

I must apologise for the shaky history lesson but history has a nasty way of repeating itself, not always in the same place in the world, but in our case we pay Danegeld to Indonesia to stay away from Australian shores. If we skip out on paying the 160 million dollars cold hard cash every year and stopped toadying to them at every opportunity they would have to come and get it themselves. The only real problem is that unlike the Danes they would not return home after the raiding season, they would be here to stay. The New World Order would not and could not help. Just have a think about why there is no U.N. [New World Order] armed intervention in Bosnia, Tibet, and Timor. And poor little old Britain had to handle it all by themselves when Argentina took the Falklands. How any one can imagine the Americans coming to help us is beyond me, but you never know. Indonesia might be just crazy enough to do us a favour and declare war on the United States as well. That's what the Japanese did and that was the only reason the Yanks came to fight in this area in 1942. Of course our situation is a little worse this time, as Indonesia is the United States' ally and is unlikely to do us that favour.

Using part of our cash aid package Indonesia has recently purchased a number of vessels of the former East German navy. Unified Germany did not need them

Dane-Geld

It is always a temptation to an armed and able nation
To puff upon a neighbour and to say -
"We invaded you last night we are quite prepared to fight -
Unless you pay us cash to go away."

And that is called asking for Dane-geld
And the people who ask it explain
That you've only to pay 'em the Dane-geld
And then you'll get rid of the Dane!

It is always a temptation to a rich and lazy nation,
To puff and look important and to say -
"Though we know we should defeat you, we have not the time to meet you.
We will therefore pay you cash to go away."

And that is called paying the Dane-geld.
But we've proved - again and again,
That once you have paid 'em the Dane-geld
You never get rid of the Dane.

It is wrong to put the nation in the hands of a nation,
For fear they should succumb and go astray;
So when you are requested to pay up or be molested,
You will find it better policy to say -

"We never pay any-one Dane-geld,
No matter how trifling the cost;
For the end of that game is oppression and shame,
And the nation that plays it is lost!"

DANE-GELD

so they have been on the market for about a year. The purchase seems to include Frosch class tank landing ships, Kondor II class coastal minesweepers and Parchim class corvettes. Thirty nine ships in total to add to there one hundred and eight they have already in commission the grand total is 147. This does not include the thousands of inter-island vehicle ferries that are part of Indonesia's navel reserve and are ocean going and quite capable of carrying tanks [Indonesia is a group of over 3000 islands and ocean ferries are the main means of trade and communication between them]. The Indonesian government is looking to Germany for assistance in its industrial development as it is expanding its large frigate building programme.

STOP PRESS

INDONESIAN NEWSPAPER, KOMPAS, QUOTED AIR MARSHAL SIBOEN, CHIEF OF STAFF, THAT INDONESIA HAD PURCHASED 144 HAWK JET FIGHTERS AND THEY WOULD BE DELIVERED SOON FROM THE U.K. THEY ALREADY HAVE ONE SQUADRON OF HAWKS IN SERVICE. THEY HAVE JUST RECEIVED THE LAST OF SIX VAN SPEIJK FRIGATES FROM THE NETHERLANDS AND TWELVE F16 FIGHTING FALCONS FROM THE U.S.

43,000 sailors, plus 1000 navel air, and 15,000 marines make up there existing navy but it looks like there will be promotion on their side of the ocean when they increase their navy by another 30% in manpower. As it is their Marines could look after Australia quite comfortably, 15,000 against our 3,100, but we could call up our cut lunch commando's, the six pack bombardiers, sorry my mistake the ready reserve. But if they called up their ready reserve they could put a million men in the field in days. This would not include their air force of 27,000 and as we have discussed previously, without the increases 59,000 in the navy. They are surging ahead in their aircraft industry and are selling army transport planes; they are making F18 parts and are negotiating to manufacture the complete plane under licence.

I suppose the worst news up to now as far as Australia is concerned is the fact that Indonesia is building twelve new nuclear power stations, all capable of producing Plutonium-239, the material needed for nuclear weapons. The financial and technical assistance is being supplied by part United Nations but mainly with Australian technical manpower, from Lucas Heights in N.S.W. The mind boggles for a moment, the first thing I thought of when I heard of this lunacy was a quote by King O'Malley when discussing politicians [who incidently were responsible for destroying the original Commonwealth Bank]: "and whose brains, if extracted, dried and placed in the quill of a cocksparrow and blown into the eye of a bee, would not even make him blink". The second thought was "treachery". Nobody, not even a mentally retarded garden gnome, would do such a thing by accident. The husband and wife spy team Rosenberg went to the gas chamber for giving nuclear secrets to the enemy, and now we have our own elected government giving information to our enemy neighbours.

Two years ago they gave our north west shelf oil fields to Indonesia without even informing us, sovereign territory given to a foreign power, that stands over us, as the Danes stood over our ancestors.

GUNS, NUTS AND SPRINGS ETC. EVERYWHERE

GUN OWNERS MUST BE GUN CLEANERS

One of the most frequent problems for new shooters is the assembly and disassembly of their firearm. With the fear and anxiety in the community over the last few years regarding the defence of homes and country, thousands of new shooters have acquired semi-auto rifles. Unfortunately many do not realise that even without background experience they are easy to strip and clean. Most do not need any tools and are designed to be assembled and disassembled in the field for cleaning or the removal of an obstruction.

tolerances to their upper limits, so at the first opportunity clean your rifle; before you eat, and after you have eaten clean it again. Before you go to sleep, if you're that lucky, clean your rifle; when you wake up, clean it again. That way you instil the discipline in yourself, you then know the workings of your rifle better than you know your mother. You know it's going to work, you have confidence, you know there isn't a stick obstructing a vital part that could cost you your life.

We had a letter from a serving Queensland policeman who requested that we feature the Ruger Mini-14 as they are issued to the force. As we are always happy to assist

Ruger Mini-14

Firearms are not like cars, they are designed to be taken apart often and easily. They are mostly easier to assemble as the owner has seen them come apart so its secrets are laid open to them. If you have a rifle put away for a rainy day it is no use trying to learn how to clean it when the balloon is going up, and you're too scared to ask anybody how to do it in case they report you for having it. H.. Learn now, its important.

A firearm receives its maximum abuse when it has field use. Despair, dirt and constant use push reliability the guys at the sharp end, here it is. Just follow the easy pictures. Don't worry if you're not one of the millions of Mini-14 owners and have another type of firearm, next edition there will be another type. If you feel your rifle is being ignored write in to the editor, Jimi Hendrix, and remind him of your model or your friend's model. We won't print your name, and if you live in N.S.W. he will even eat your letter to stop it falling into enemy hands, with a tin of pal of course, to help it down.

Yours patriotically, Sergeant York.

1. Make sure it is not loaded.
2. Remove the magazine.
3. Cock the rifle by pulling the slide all the way to the rear and easing back forward.
4. Apply safety catch.

5. Using something the same size as the cartridge (but if you do, don't try and shoot it, more than likely it will jam), insert the implement into the hole at the rear of the trigger guard and lever downwards and forwards. (Fig 1)

6. When the trigger guard is swinging loose, make sure that the guard is in the forward position, then pull downwards and out. (Fig 2)

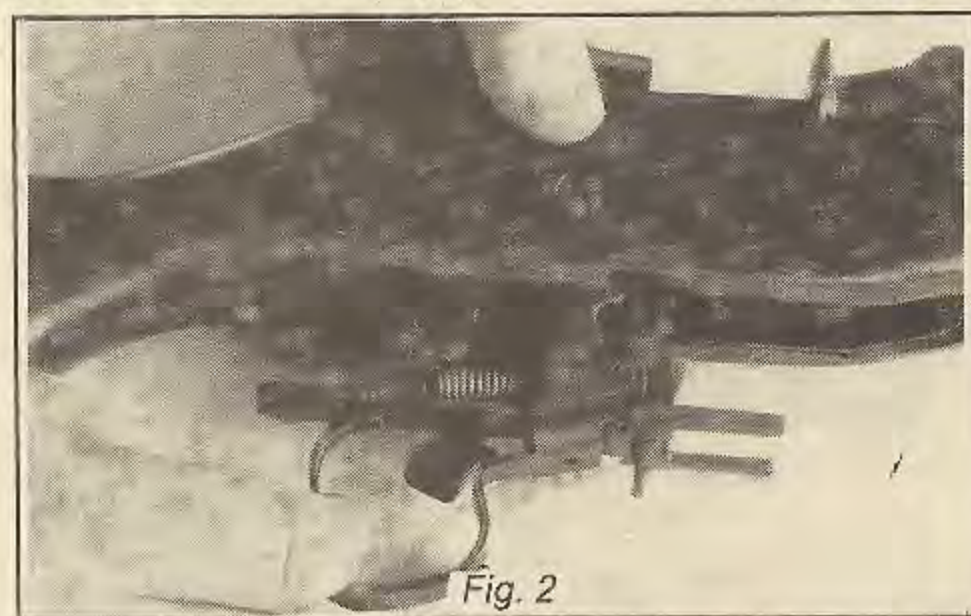

Fig. 2

7. Lift up rear of receiver two inches and pull stock to the rear; this will separate the stock from the receiver.(Fig 3)

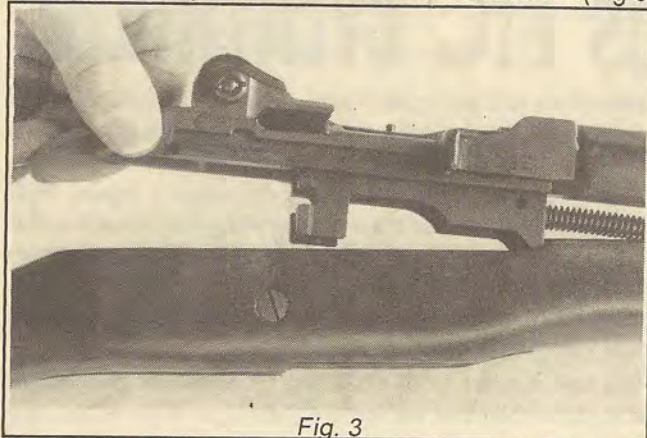

Fig. 3

8. Pull buffer guide rod and return spring towards the muzzle half an inch and then remove it from the slide/carrier (Fig. 4). Be particularly careful at this stage, as over the last 20 years there have been at least three different set-ups in the front of the receiver where the guide rod sits. Nothing complicated, just observe to make sure that you don't lose any small parts, such as pins or bushes. If you don't see any, do not worry, you probably have an old model that is less complicated. Just observe so that they go back in the same place.

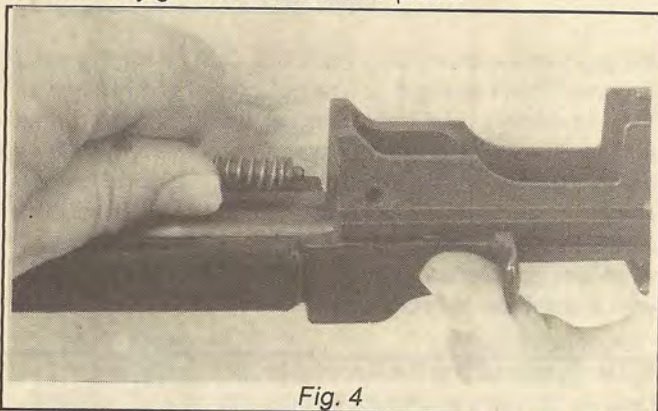

Fig. 4

9. Pull the slide to the rear and line up the projection on the slide with a recess in the rail on the receiver, then twist the muzzle end of the slide/carrier to left side of the rifle and the carrier will separate from the receiver (Fig. 5).

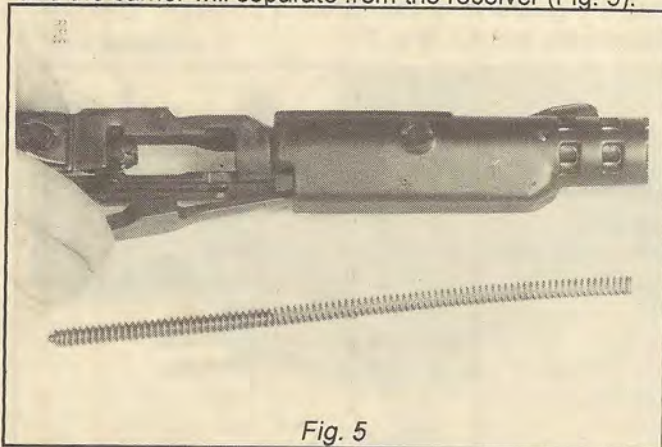

Fig. 5

10. On new models, remove the bolt lock cover plate by pushing it downwards, then remove the plunger and spring. (Fig. 6) This will allow the ejector/ bolt stop to be pulled out. With the old models they have an internal ejector in the bolt so this section is unnecessary, just go straight to 11.

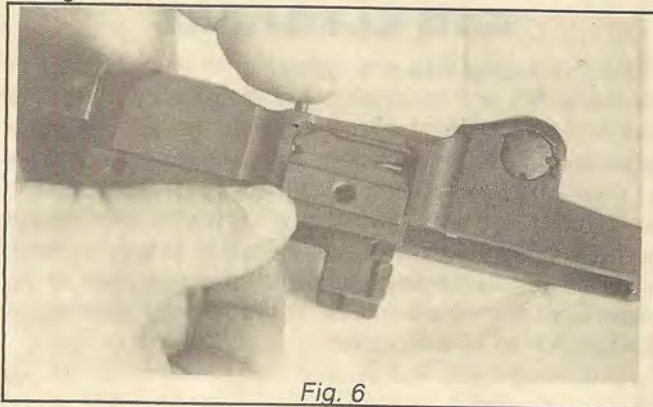

Fig. 6

11. Push the bolt forwards until it stops, turn it until firing pin aligns with a slot in the receiver. Then push it forwards, keeping the front of the bolt approx 30 degrees to the right of the receiver (Fig. 7).

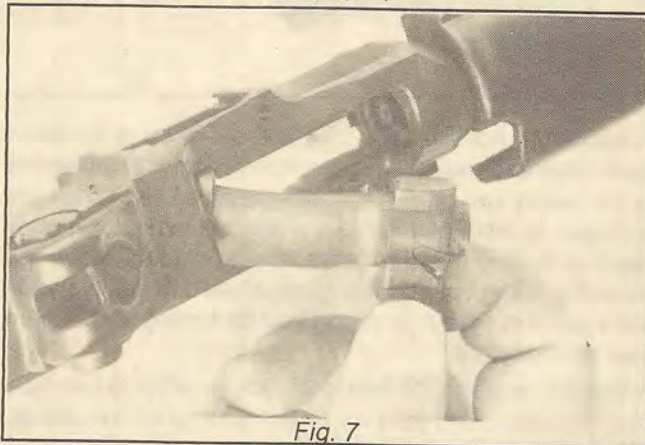

Fig. 7

Attention. Do not attempt to remove the gas block assembly. That is the thing on the barrel held down with 4 allen head screws. It is not necessary as there are no moving parts inside, and cleaning can be accomplished by external means.

No further disassembly is required. Assemble in reverse order.

REALISING THE SOVEREIGNTY OF THE UNITED NATIONS

by Stanley W. Johnston, Reader in Criminology at Melbourne University, and UNAA federal Vice-President

Some people still cannot accept the United Nations as the world government - perhaps because big government seems frighteningly powerful. But the United Nations is not as frightening - nor as far above us - as lesser governments have been, governments to which in the past defence imperatives have led us to entrust power. Anarchy is worse than big government, and those who deny UN authority and are not committed to the rule of the UN law are anarchists.

A sovereign is that person or body who receives habitual obedience from the bulk of a society (Austin). Sovereignty attaches to states, not only to national states. Australians speak of the Crown in relation to the Commonwealth, and the Crown in relation to the State, and we assert our sovereign authority at whatever level is appropriate.

What is the present scope of national sovereignty?

The UN Charter assumes "the sovereign equality of all its members": articles 2(1) and 78. That principle does not preserve national supremacy against the United Nations - it merely gives nations big and small equal standing with each other. National sovereignty refers to (1) territorial integrity and political independence (from other nations, but not from the United Nations), and (2) the agreed scope of domestic jurisdiction.

In the declaration on the Inadmissibility of Intervention in the Domestic Affairs of States and the protection of their Independence and Sovereignty 1965, the Law on Friendly Relations between States 1970 and the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States 1974, nation states list their duties, specifically acknowledging their submission to the United Nations.

By the UN Charter, nations surrendered the finality of their authority on certain major matters of global concern. In this way we share in the larger sovereignty of the United Nations - just as Australians stand politically taller than Victorians.

What sort of government is the United Nations?

The United Nations, like our own government, has a legislative body (the General Assembly), an executive council (the Security Council), a judiciary (the World Court and human rights tribunals) and a civil service - all with appropriate variations from the forms we are accustomed to. The UN will enforce law; thirteen articles of the UN Charter refer to

POLITICAL TREASON

Australia Realises No Other Sovereignty But Its Own

The Chapter of our Australian Constitution that these international traitors hate the most is 44. Quote:

"Any person who-

[i] is under any acknowledgment of allegiance, obedience, or adherence to a foreign power, or is a subject or a citizen or entitled to the rights or privileges of a subject or a foreign power; shall be incapable of being chosen or of sitting as a senator or a member of the house of representatives.

[ii] is attainted of treason,

In Chapter 46 it states, "Any person declared by this Constitution to be incapable of sitting as a senator or as a member of the House of Representatives shall, for every day on which he sits, be liable to pay the sum of one hundred pounds to any person who sues for it in any court of competent jurisdiction."

Plainly speaking, any traitor who sits in parliament can be financial broken by any citizen who takes them to court, but most importantly, any of our parliamentarians or senators who accept Mr Stanley Johnston's concept and acknowledging their submission to the United Nations are traitors and have to resign from parliament or face the people in court.

Obedience or adherence to a foreign power in anyone's language is treason; anybody who has taken the oath or affirmation of allegiance, [such as naturalised Australians and all members of the Senate and House of Representatives which Mr Keating is in a big hurry to change], and give obedience or adherence to the United Nations deserves to suffer at the hands of the citizens of Australia. Every politician who signs a United Nations international agreement is guilty of breaking his oath or affirmation and the constitution, and loses the right to his seat.

Stanley W. Johnston has been subverting Australia for years. He first raised his head on the green band-wagon, turning Victoria's mountain region into "no shooting" areas, national parks and wilderness, closing timber mills and chasing out the high country cattlemen who had been looking after that part of the world for 100 years with no bad results. If he has anything to do with criminology, the most abused subject which any poorly equipped academic can shine in, as all can find some pet theory to brandish at the equally misinformed media, you can put money on the fact that he would be well acquainted with the "kinky" professor Paul Wilson who has tried to sound like an authority on gun laws for ten years, ever since his fellow criminologist Professor Hardin wrote an equally unauthentic book on the subject. Government departments, mainly Labor controlled, employ these overpaid nitwits to expound theories on anything from prostitution to gun laws. Nobody is supposed to ask where their information or education originates. Who sets the standards on criminology theories? Is it the United Nations or do they just scratch one another's backs? Do not be deceived - it has nothing to do with police detection; policeman would have nothing but disdain for these creatures.

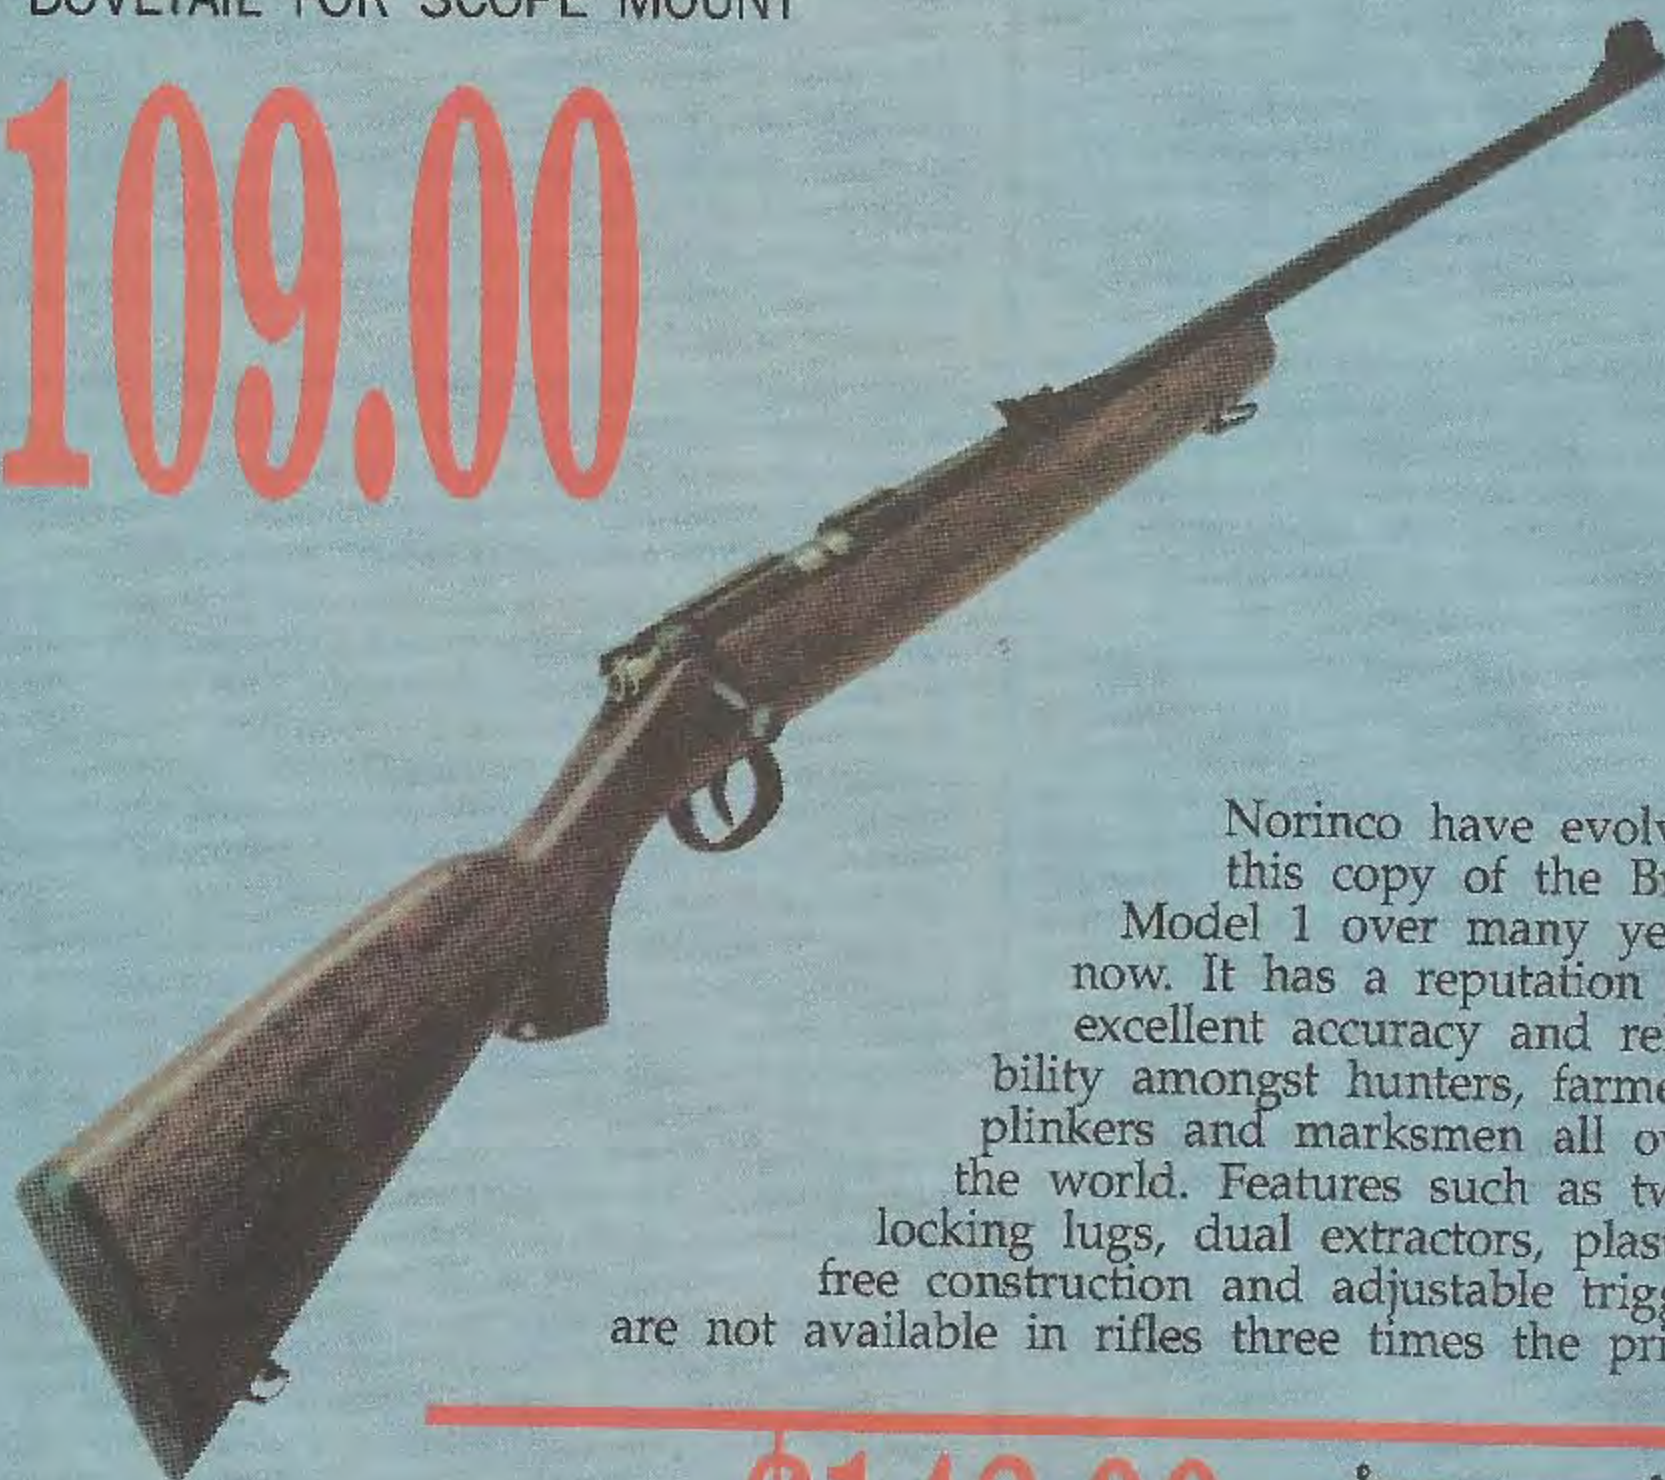

Now we find he is Vice-President of the United Nations Association of Australia. This little insidious group put out a monthly newsletter and have branches in most Australian towns. If you want to find out who the real enemy in your town is put some feelers out and turn up at a meeting with your note book and pocket tape recorder. When you find out what these cretins are planning it will keep you in nightmares for weeks, but it will make you and your friends more aware of what we are up against. This U.N.A.A.

VIDEO REVIEW - Machine Gun Magic

Mike Dillon of Dillon Precision is a self-confessed machine gun freak. By making this video he will appeal to any shooter who has ever had visions of letting rip with a Thompson at tin cans, right up to turning a car body to Swiss cheese with a 50 Browning, but at the same time stressing the stringent safety procedures that must first be followed.

Safety and responsibility are emphasized throughout the film; these are a dedicated bunch of enthusiasts who appreciate, as they put it, "high performance equipment". They go to every length to ensure their range is safe, flying over the seven-odd miles of run-off in a helicopter before the shooting starts, even though they have chosen a site that is virtually inaccessible.

One nice touch was a repeated caution mentioning the use of telephoto lenses sometimes giving the optical illusion that shots were being fired above the heads of shooters. It went on to state this should NEVER be done. Obviously the American anti-gun movement would like to ban private ownership of these firearms, and used like this they are NOT weapons.

A Gatling Gun in action.

The video is a good mixture of profiles of various machine guns, visits to a movie ordnance rental company, a military museum, McDonnell Douglas (the makers of "chain guns"), and of course the live firing range. In most cases the guns featured are described by their owners, giving a brief history, handling characteristics, rate of fire, and a practical demonstration. At the risk of sounding sexist, it was great to see a number of women shooters involved, and obviously enjoying their sport.

Even though only relevant in the United States, it was interesting to note the legal requirements necessary for collectors and shooters to own these rather expensive toys. It surprised me a lot to learn that approval can take up to six months - so much for America's non-existent gun laws! And so to the range firing.

The appetiser consisted of a radio-controlled car beaching itself about 200 metres away and subsequently being showered by bullets from all manners of machine guns. At times it was hard to even see the car body through the dust, and it sounded like a full-scale war going on.

To reveal what happens when the sun goes down would be a criminal act, and would spoil the "magic" of seeing it for yourself. And don't be impatient to turn it off as the credits come rolling up; just when you think it's safe to hit the button, up comes: "For those of you who have had enough, REWIND NOW!... For those of you who can never get enough, STANDBY!"

I must admit to being one of the latter, and have since watched it several times. All in the interests of writing this review, of course. The camera work is excellent, and the whole video package very professionally put together.

Yes, there's no doubt that Mike Dillon is an unrepentant machine gun freak. Thank God there are still some sane people like Mike still out there... - The Troll Under the Bridge

Copies of this video are available from Malcolm Bone, P.O.Box 90, Gympie Q4570 for $66.00 plus post.

THE FIRE OF AGINCOURT

Five hundred years ago, which in the run of time is not too long ago, Henry the Fifth with nine thousand English and Welsh men had been struggling through France on foot pushing heavy carts towards Flanders and the Somme in the pouring rain, sleeping in the open on poor food for a fortnight. The French had been using the scorched earth strategy, except it wasn't scorched, it was down right soggy. They had been withdrawing constantly, extending Henry's supply line and leaving nothing to give succour to the attackers, slowly gathering an immense army of sixty thousand men, mostly armoured knights, who were fresh and rested and keen to wipe out these bedraggled soggy ghosts, so they could get on and invade England. They met one morning in a field called Agincourt which was again very wet, the French with plumes and feathers flowing on their armour plate, the Brits in their soaking wet clothes contemplating a disaster.

I can see a strong resemblance to our present day circumstances. Australians are facing economic servitude to the state and the banks. They are being disarmed and dishonoured by leaders who work for foreign powers. You haven't got sixty thousand Frenchmen to face but you are facing the destruction of your country, the destruction of your cultural heritage, and the loss of ownership of the land called Australia. Thousands of young Australians have gone under already. They have been taking their own lives, some with the bullet and others with the bottle. You are facing a hostile Indonesia and 30 million new Asian immigrants and your own government is paying for court cases to give your soil to Aborigines. If we are doomed, what chance do our children have with the twisted education they are receiving?

Defeat is ominous.

Henry the fifth did not lose on that day at Agincourt. He won a great victory for England which turned the balance of power in England's favour for a 100 years. His nine thousand men killed ten thousand Frenchmen which included the Constable of France, 160 princes and nobles, 8400 lords, barons, and knights and 1600 not named. 1500 dukes, lords, barons and knights were taken prisoner and prisoners not named were not counted.

Henry the Fifth lost Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk, Sir Richard Kelly, Davy Gam, Esquire and twenty five others not named, twenty nine in total. What could we do with inspiration?

Henry's secret to success was that he inspired his men to do great things. We can learn much from what he said that day so I have tried to adapt his words to present day issues.

It is often said,

"If we only had right here and now just ten percent of Australians who have suffered silently, that could make the difference."

But I say "no"

"If the enemy is to win and we are to be marked out, silenced and disarmed then there is enough of us now for the cause to lose.

If by chance we win and live to see this battle through the fewer men the better, as just one man more is another to share the victory, money and nice clothes are nothing to me but I see no disgrace in seeking honour.

If you find the truth, it sets you free, have faith in our cause and persistence as success is only given to those that hang on when others let go.

If you are faint hearted and lack enthusiasm for what we have to do you should leave Australia and live in another country which has total state control, we will help you get there, our fellowship would hate to have you quitters counted with ourselves.

If the greatest challenge in our struggle is going to be today any of our small band who fight through and are still here tomorrow will always remember today. In decades to come when this epic is mentioned you will stand on tiptoes and be proud, you will make sure that no one will forget, that all good men will teach their children of what sacrifices and achievements were made today.

If you will tell of our achievements our names will become household words even if they may never be printed, Doring, Pitt, Langhorst, Gourly, Dare, Lee, McNiven, Allens and all that are in our close tied band. From this day to the ending of the New World Order, we against it will be remembered.

If we are spoken of, some inspiration will be passed on through the generations. If this spark can be remembered it can light the flames of freedom forever and today until the end of time we will be remembered. We happy band of patriots are as brothers to me and each other, all that fight today with us will be a part of me for all of my life.

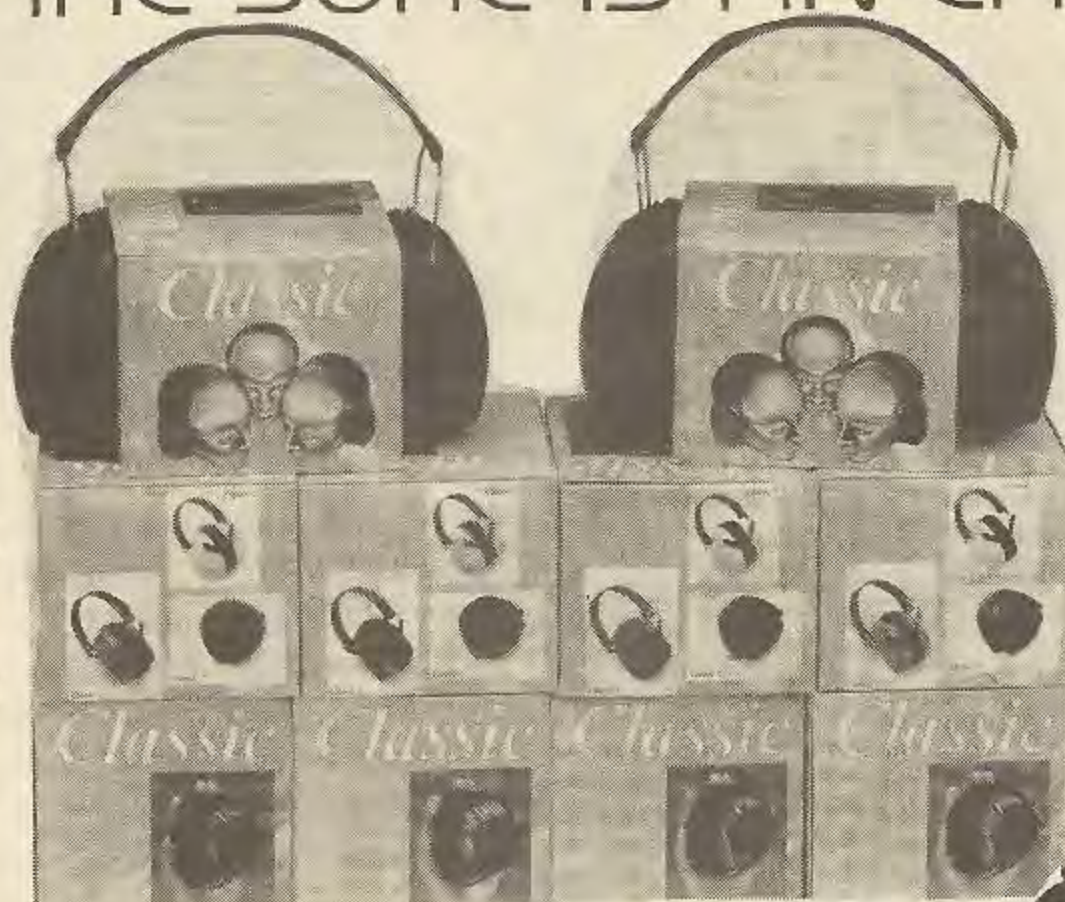

If the silent majority envies our happy bond and wishes they had taken action at our side they will have nothing but disappointment and regret that they slumbered while Australia's freedom faced its darkest hour, they won't be able to say, "Yes, I was with them that day"

People who have held opposing views to the enemy and campaigned openly in public against them should "not" be recruited for the resistance movement. It is likely these people will be the first people arrested and subjected to brain washing. They would then be returned and kept as bait for the approach of resistance personal. You should always keep these people at a great distance from your operation so your membership is not compromised.

Make sure this "golden rule" of recruitment is well known to the enemy. This way you can protect these valuable and courageous people to some degree since once the enemy is aware of this policy, his interest in them will diminish.

Any citizens who knows they are obviously going to be picked up and arrested for having beliefs contrary to the "New World Order" for example Baptists or Jehovah Witness might as well join the guerilla units as soon as possible as they are too well known and when caught will either be transported or shot.

Anybody wishing to work in with the resistance movement must be as inconspicuous as possible and remain silent in public. Prominent personalities are also to be avoided as they are exposed to a special type of danger. They may be made to swear allegiance to the "New World Order" in public on television, while their families are being held at gun point. This would loose them support even from his comrades so beware, do not use them.

Reasons for Joining

In the hour of distress nobody will help the "non-fighter". As a member of the resistance movement you are protected by it. It can warn you when the enemy intends to arrest you and help you escape.

All those who by nature of their decent, profession, or ideology are considered potential enemies and thus risk deportation or execution [ie. gunshop owners]. These people would be advised to join the resistance or guerilla units immediately as time would be running out for these people.

Contact and work with individuals of similar conviction. If one remains alone and isolated his morale will deteriorate. The isolated member of the resistance is subject to the same threat of fear and desperation that a soldier may feel when isolated from his unit during conventional warfare.

Next edition we will continue with activities, escape, finance, secret printing presses and enemy counter measures.

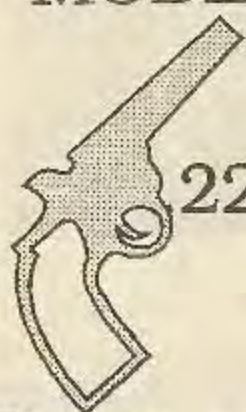

Returning to Australia, today's news is that at the Premiers Conference, all premiers of all states (from Labor and Liberal parties) agreed to pass legislation within the next 12 months to ban and remove all guns from Australia's homes. When are the people going to get off their backsides and legally remove these traitors? Soon before it turns into Apathralia I hope.

Keep swinging from the trees!

Yours in revolution, Robin Hood.

PRODUCT REVIEW

Whitworth Copper Solvent

After many years of seeing perfectly good firearms wrecked through neglect or barbarous cleaning practices I have something of a fetish on using the right gear to protect the bore of a rifle or shotgun. I'm sure that some of the worst habits, like towing a loose-fitting oily rag through a barrel with a piece of string or fishing line, are passed down from father to son, but the rifle itself has no hope of surviving until the next generation comes along. The exterior is kept free of dust and rust, while the interior is a disaster area.

A friend of mine has always treated his rifles like this, so I felt cleaning one of his with Whitworth's new Copper Solvent would be a good indication of its effectiveness. True to form, his P14 was average in appearance, but resembled a long dark railway tunnel down the bore.

Scrubbing the barrel with a new .30 calibre bronze brush soaked in the solvent produced a wicked amount of black fouling for the first fifteen minutes or so. Then followed a period of about half an hour of blue-tinged patches, which of course signals dissolved copper fouling. When I was satisfied that there was not much else the solvent would remove I pushed through a patch soaked in Sweets solvent. This is now recognised in the U.S. as a dynamite brew, and is far more effective than anything made over there.

The colour of the patch removing the Sweets from the barrel had no tinge of colour; the barrel obviously did not have any fouling for the Sweets to pick up, so I can only conclude that the Whitworth is a very good solvent indeed.

With its very reasonable pricing I hope, if only for my own peace of mind, that more shooters will get into the habit of using it. Certainly many more firearms would survive the ravages of time for the enjoyment of generations to come.

RIOTS IN

Will It Take Your Own Quiet Riot? IN DOWNTOWN TOOWONG?

The evil in L.A. was just a concentrated form of the one-on-one evil that stalks Australia every nightfall, untouched by gun laws and ignored by media. In dark parking lots instead of crowded streets. Smashing through bedroom windows instead of store windows. Demolishing lives instead of whole neighbourhoods. One lonely woman at a time, one businessman at a time, one family at a time, one innocent victim at a time.

When will it be you, or yours? Would you then demand an end to senseless attacks on firearm freedoms?

How did the young lady pistol shooter feel as she was sat in that restaurant in the Strathfield shopping centre, denied the right to carry her pistol? What a feeling; hours of wasted practice, of wasted life. That psychiatrist-programmed killer hacked his first victim to death with a large knife. She could have incapacitated the killer in seconds, saving numerous lives and discouraging other maniacs from selecting unarmed citizens.

None of these suicidal killers ever attack an airport, police station, army barracks, or a gun shop. They look for areas where large groups of people are undefended with unarmed security guards and unarmed shop keepers.

Will It Take More Criminals On Your Streets? IN INDOOROPILLY?

A staggering 10,000 people were arrested during the LOS ANGELES riots. Almost half had prior criminal records, were released on parole or were granted probations from felony convictions. Los Angeles Deputy Attorney John Wilson said, "There is no question that a major element of professional criminals were involved." Few are surprised; still fewer do anything about it.

Two million people can not be defended by two thousand police, that is the reality in Queensland. If you phone at 12 midnight on Saturday because you have prowlers on your carport roof, expect them approximately WEDNESDAY at midday to take a report of the incident. They would be too busy checking some poor shooter's licence to make sure the name was spelt correctly, while unarmed citizens are being murdered in their homes.

Will It Take Your Own Taste Of Terror? IN YOUR HOME?

When panic struck, 65,000 gun controls "supporters" were first in line at gun shops. They were denied because of California 15 day waiting period - shocked, then outraged, that the gun control they wanted for others now applied to them. So they furiously filed their firearm purchase applications, hoping government would give them permission to exercise their basic civil rights. To protect themselves.

The Criminals were denied nothing.

In that moment the 65,000 denied applicants became ex-gun-control supporters, new Second Amendment converts who joined the American majority that believe law-abiding citizens should never be denied the right to buy firearms.

They'll not be fooled again. California gun purchase applications are up 60%. And each one represents a brutally enlightened Californian who no longer believes in gun control.

WILL IT HAVE TO HAPPEN IN AUSTRALIA BEFORE PEOPLE WAKE UP?

The Final Toll For Gun Control

- * 52 dead
- * 2,383 injured
- * 10,000 arrested
- * 4,500 buildings/homes destroyed
- * 10,000 businesses destroyed
- * $735 million property damage
- * $600 million in federal aid

How many crimes were prevented by California's gun control laws?

NONE.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Jimi,

Thank you for the copy of Nov-Dec 92 issue of Lock Stock & Barrel.

There are some points about the article "Revolution in Apathralia" which strike me as potentially bad advice, although doubtlessly well enough intended.

For example, the advice to dig in soft soil rather than rock, because of the danger of flying rock shard. You're possibly not aware that nowadays technology has now progressed to the point where there is radar which can penetrate soil to considerable depth. Archaeologists have been very successfully using it to locate all kinds of hidden objects. There is also another technique for looking beneath the soil using infra-red photographs taken from an aircraft at night - things like tunnels show up beautifully with it. Any tunnel shielding you use to protect against IR could show up beautifully on radar and vice versa. Once the enemy knows precisely where the tunnels are all he has to do is drill a hole down to them and drop poison gas and/or explosive charges down same.

So this is why it's probably better to go for hard rock instead. To protect against flying shard, erect within the tunnel some kind of protective structure of steel, wood or concrete. Or polycarbonate sheet. One with suitable slits in it to fire through at anyone who comes down the tunnel after you. Best trick of the lot is to dig the tunnel close to something the enemy would be reluctant to lose, eg major water mains, petrol refinery, railway line, skyscraper, etc.

You mention breaking from a tunnel into thick concealing scrub. Be aware that if you pull that stunt at night satellite nowadays have on board infra-red detection gear which can pick up a target as small as a human, even through thick scrub, and transmit the information in real time. It might be possible to confound such systems to a degree by throwing over your head and upper torso an aluminised space blanket, shiny side inwards. Otherwise plan on digging a very long tunnel indeed.

For digging tunnels in either soil or rock, the ordinary pick is useless. The best pick is the miners pick, in the "Ballarat pattern", as made by Trojan. Be certain to get the latest pattern which can accept the standard size and shape pick handle. Because of its design this pick can be used conveniently in tight corners. Also, unlike other picks, its point is hard enough to cut rock and concrete. Handles should be lacquered to reduce splinters in hands. If you order through local hardware shops you'll have to wait ages while they bring them in, and they'll charge you for these picks like wounded bulls. Cheaper to purchase them from Engineering and Mining Services, Darra and pay cash on the spot so you don't leave records around to tell snoopers that you've purchased such distinctive items.

Another handy item to have is the "builder's loaded" version of a crowbar. Unlike the ordinary cheap crowbar, it has a point hard enough to dig through rock and concrete. They're expensive, more than twice the price of an ordinary bar, but unlike them the quality of the steel is good enough to be worth the trouble and expense of the blacksmith's repairs. Again Engineering & Mining Services is the best to try for these.

Protecting bunkers with mines, booby traps, trip wires, etc could be a mistake in that it tells the enemy that maybe he should look more closely at that area. Better to try for some sort of intruder detection system which may very quietly alert you that you have visitors without telling the visitors that they've been detected. Mines might be a good idea provided that they're set so that they can only be fired at your choosing by remote control. That way an enemy can pass through the area close to your bunker without necessarily being alerted that there's something there to search for, but if he does somehow uncover what he shouldn't then in an instant the whole area becomes a death trap for him. Once the enemy gets to know you work that way his troops will probably be very reluctant to do a proper search, and breath a silent sigh of relief if you manage to slip away quietly. They might even finish up "fragging" their own officers if they push too enthusiastically for a search, and that of course will really do wonders for enemy morale.

CONCERNEND CITIZEN, Toowong Qld.

PS Now, if we really wish to get bloody diabolical, there's a point we should remember about the nature of hydrogen cyanide gas. It's lighter than air, which is why it's not normally favoured as a war gas - normally we'd be looking for something heavier than air which would cling to the ground, like chlorine or mustard. BUT, the Soviets rather cleverly worked it out that the old HCN is really just the ticket to load into the multiple warheads of a "Katyusha" (Stalin's Organ) rocket launcher. Fear what happens then is that the fast action of the HCN kills the troops before they even get their masks on, and then the gas disperses quickly so that it's safe to move your own troops in soon after.

Now, apply that to a foxhole situation, where you have suitable feed hoses leading from the hole to various points on the surface. You just send a gentle whiff or two up the hoses when it suits you. Unless the enemy is wearing masks all the time (and this starts very quickly to become an awful physical and psychological strain after a while) he's likely to be instantly and silently wiped out. Even if you don't catch out the enemy himself you just might be lucky enough to get his tracker dogs!!

Dear Jimmi,

An attempt to understand, to work out issues and find the points and imperatives.

Basically - the government(s) are not being honest and perhaps far less honest than most people, even now tend to assume.

That some people are hurting very badly, are really very desperate and those who should be finding ways to help are not co-operating.

Fears of losing by stealth that which we have taken for granted to be replaced by something quite inferior and threatening.

That the economy is bad and not enough is being done, especially where it hurts most at the personal level.

Plainly the government(s) have things to answer and must come clean - the alternative is in your magazine.

Yours sincerely, Happy New Year,
ROSEMARY Q.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

I am an ASIO agent. I joined ASIO in 1974 after completing my degree at Monash University majoring in Asian Studies. I had applied to join the Department of Foreign Affairs but was contacted by an individual who said he might have a more "challenging" position for me in the Public Service.

After several interviews at which I came across as "sound", I was offered a position in ASIO which I accepted. To be honest my mind was filled with images of covert actions, shoot outs with terrorists and glamorous women chasing me.

How soon the cold wind of reality blew against me. Life revolved around constant paperwork and meetings. The Federal Government does not employ graduates to do routine street work. The Federal Police have the right qualifications of possessing flat feet, a taste for takeaway food and sufficient funds for overtime. My letter is an account of how many people in ASIO have become disillusioned with the Service. ASIO operatives are used when you don't want the Federal and State police to become involved in something that is usually embarrassing for the Federal Government.

And with regards to embarrassment, there was plenty to go around and it usually involved basic human weaknesses. The closest I came to glamorous women was when I had to drag a very tired and emotional (as a new) African official who was ostensibly in Australia to observe the proceedings of the CHOGM (Commonwealth Heads of Government) meeting out of a Gentlemen's Relaxation Centre in downtown Potts Point after making a nuisance of himself. Matters came to such a state that the local taxi drivers were joking about all the cannibals running about the place looking for a bit of white meat.

When morale drops in any organisation cynicism soon appears. One of my colleagues was assigned to investigating the growing of marijuana by a minority of a certain ethnic community. The proceeds from sale of the ha-ha weed were sent back to the old country to buy weapons to fight an oppressive government. Our government didn't want to (a) admit that anybody in Australia would do such a nasty thing and (b) upset the ethnic lobby groups by investigating some of their fellow countrymen. The government wouldn't lose much sleep about a bunch of wogs blowing themselves up in Eastern Europe, but losing votes from an ethnic community in Australia who felt that they were being persecuted by ASIO was just going a little too far. My colleague, after spending much time on the assignment was, to say the least, a little pissed off. Whilst on a field trip to observe dope plantations near the small Queensland town of Pomona on the Sunshine Coast he received a message to abort the trip. He promptly resigned, and being wise enough to see the forthcoming land boom about to occur in Queensland, used his retirement money to buy available land. He is still up there and when requested sends down any juicy gossip he hears. Rumour has it that he has become very friendly with a certain community and takes a strong interest in horticulture.

I lost my sense of purpose when I saw a report from a Queensland police officer in Mount Isa. The police officer has received reports from isolated Aboriginal settlements that "yella fellas" were landing on the beaches and were looking at things, and that they had guns. He dismissed the reports reasoning that it was probably Japanese tourists on a fishing trip. When he finally got up to the area on a routine inspection the Aborigines were still adamant that they were telling the truth. The officer inspected several of these sites and quickly found the remains of Indonesian ration packs. He immediately but discreetly informed the regional head office in Townsville and was told to say nothing about it and not to put anything down in writing. The officer was subsequently transferred to Brisbane. In the interest of bilateral relations (read junkets to Bali) with Indonesia the whole episode was quashed by our political masters who preferred cross cultural exchanges on an exotic tropical island rather than an inspection of African Railways organised by Austrade.

The final straw for me was having to take part in a hushup of a suicide. Buggery may no longer be illegal on the mainland states, but being caught in the act is still usually highly embarrassing for the participants when exposed (no pun intended), especially when you are a member of the political party in power at the time. A loathsome little man had some rather juicy photographs of the politician in some funny positions. When the politician refused to pay up, photos were sent to his wife who was shocked, as she thought he was only into adolescent girls. The poor woman electrocuted herself deliberately while having a bath. Hubby came home and found her and went into a blind panic. I and two associates were despatched post haste to the home with instructions to make it look like an accident. It is poetic justice that the speech this politician will always be remembered for at least in certain official quarters is "Pass me the Preparation H please".

I am still employed with ASIO, but not for much longer, as I have nearly paid off my double mortgage on my house. As soon as I can get a big enough retirement package I'm out. I will write you another letter with more detailed information later.

Dear Jimmi, LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

In 1985 the FBI approached Randy Weaver, a former Special Forces soldier in Viet Nam and asked him to become an informant for the federal government. Weaver refused. He then filed an affidavit saying he feared for his life as a result of the refusal.

In August of 1992, an eleven day siege of the Weaver home in Northern Idaho began. A federal agent charged that Weaver had a shotgun with a barrel a 1/4" too short. Weaver said it was a frame-up for refusing to pimp for the government. Over 500 federal personnel (federal marshalls, FBI and ATF agents, US Army soldiers, some of whom had just returned from the killing fields in Iraq) surrounded the Weaver home, and above in the sky flew US Air Force planes and personnel. Included in the federals on the ground were crack snipers, trained at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Virginia. Their job was to kill Weaver. Weaver had vowed not to surrender to the federals on the phoney charges brought as punishment for refusing them.

The siege ended August 31, with the surrender of Weaver. But not before the snipers had shot Weaver's 14-year-old son Samuel in the back killing him, and blew Weaver's wife's head apart as she stood at the front door of the cabin, as she was holding their ten-month old baby in her arms. Your government's sniper bullet shatter Mrs. Weaver's skull (a mother of four) with such force that as her skull exploded, bone fragments struck the chest of family friend Kevin Harris as he was running through the doorway, causing serious damage to his lung.

The federals have by these two murders of a child and a woman violated the rules of civilized warfare. War is made upon men, not upon women and children.

The federals have made a terrible error in the Weaver case that they will long regret. Their cruelty and callous disregard for the rules of civilized warfare will have the effect of solidifying opposition to them. Long after Weaver is tried and has been freed by the courts as an innocent man wrongfully accused, there will be 10,000 men in this country who harbor in their hearts a terrible hatred for the federals and all they stand for. The attack upon the weaver family was an attack upon all of us.

The federals will get their 1/4" of gun barrel. Along with the other 18 or so inches that comes behind it. Mark my word, this incident, like that of the murder of Gordon Kahl will not go away.

Psst!

Hey you. Wanna make some money?

How?

Dead simple mate, just buy every single shot .22 rifle and all the six inch P.V.C. pipe you can lay your hands on.

I know, I know. You're thinking that Lithgow .22s and P.V.C. pipe aren't worth much. But they soon will be.

Why you ask?

Well it seems that all the do-gooders have been getting in the ears of our esteemed politicians and persuading them that the safety of the nation and especially that of the fairer sex are at great risk because all you lunatic men are quietly sitting in your lounge rooms playing with your kids, watching T.V., reading books and all those other deviant activities you must surely get up to.

You see, you're all guilty of wife bashing at least and mass murder at worst, and the evidence is right there, locked in the spare room. Go see for yourself. There it is! That piece of steel and timber giving off those strange malevolent signals. No, not the desk stupid! That's made out of some other steel and timber that hasn't been cursed. You're looking for the stuff they made Christine out of. Yes, that's it. THE GUN.

What more proof do you want? Don't you now see the terror you have been reeking on your family?

Now don't try to give me that rubbish about being a happy, normal, well adjusted family. You can't be, you have a gun! Says so, right there on the central registry computer.

But don't worry. Do-gooders incorporated has the solution. All we have to do is take all those nasty old guns and put them all in a central repository so that next time little Johnny doesn't eat his peas, you won't reach for the .458. Simple hey!

Of course we may have to encase these repositories in lead and concrete just in case the combined radiating evil from so many instruments of the Devil being in one place unleashes the Golem or removes the fourth seal or something like that.

All sounds pretty expensive doesn't it? Not to worry, we'll just add the cost onto the licence fees. Lets see, say fifteen or twenty dollars per week for each firearm stored should cover the building and administration costs.

But I digress. I was going to tell you how to make some money. You see, when all those shooters out there finally wake up that these bastards are fair-dinkum, they are going to do one of several things.

Some of them, probably target shooters, will dutifully run down to log their guns in and hand over their cheques.

Some will surrender their guns to their friendly local constabulary to dispose of. No doubt by burning at the stake.

Some will just try to ignore the situation until the inevitable moment when the storm troopers kick the door in.

But the vast majority, loathe to give up their pride and joy, will try to pull a swifty. These people will take the only rifle they didn't sell a couple of years ago, (honest officer), which invariably will be a Lithgow .22 or single barrelled shot gun and place it in the storage facilities. Then they will rush out and buy some P.V.C. pipe and bury all their other treasures until they want to go hunting out at their mate's place out west, after which they will re-bury them and so on.

So there you have it. A fortune to be made. But whatever you do, don't mention that the owner of the property they plan to use the contraband weapons on will have plenty of time to evaluate their friendship while he is serving the ten years for allowing unregistered firearms onto his land. Might be bad for business!

Of course all of this would be nothing more than fiction if shooters would just forget about who their father or grandfather voted for, and realised that there are political groups out there who will not tolerate attacks on the rights of firearm owners. Of course there are other issues to consider, but let's face it, you would have to try bloody hard to cock things up more than the clowns that are in there at the moment. The situation above is being implemented by the government right now. No great noises will be made about until well after the election of course, wouldn't want to wake up the sheep would we? In a month or two, you will decide whether this article will become just a bit of a giggle or the beginning of a nightmare. Take heed, this is surely your last chance.

Now while we are solving all the problems of the world. I have just realised that approximately half the population possesses the necessary equipment to commit rape. Now being in possession of this equipment must surely mean that you are either guilty of rape or you are a potential rapist who hasn't yet committed the actual offence.

Now as fifty percent of the population gets by just fine without these particular appendages you obviously don't need them, so what we have to do is take a big knife....

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Jimmi,

This letter is to ask your advice the situation we have in Victoria.

I have a group or section of men and women who think very much the same way as I do.

At this stage we are getting a many Miles into our feet as well as getting the equipment together. Backpack Webbing and tent.

Our biggest problem is getting the semi automatics rifles for when the time comes.

Because of the economy down here I am the only one who is employed the rest are unemployed and would find it very hard to outlay the amount we would need to buy the likes of a Maegun Parts Kit and AK Sporter Kit.

My own experience is in the Armed forces covering ten years.

Any advice would be greatly appreciated.

Yours Faithfully,

Michael Malloy

Dear Dog,

I attended a meeting recently of Australia First at Nambour where I was handed a copy of your magazine. Enclosed please find $15.00 for annual subscription.

I do not own a rifle, the last one I had was taken off me by the Japanese in 1942.

I have been very interested in what is happening world wide since I first read Gary Allan's "None Dare Call it Conspiracy," about 20 years ago.

Whilst there are now literally dozens of groups in Australia opposing the New World Order, it would appear to me that they all have one thing in common and that is that they refuse to accept the main reason why it is necessary for a One World Government to be established.

The world population is increasing in excess of 97,000,000 new faces per annum and unless some organisation prevents from being born, or EXTERMINATES something like 125 to 200,000,000 people per annum, the human specie and its environment will self destruct by the year 2020 A.D., when the present world population of 5.5 billion increases to around 8.2 billion people. The world simply cannot sustain an increase of 50% in the next 30 years, and that is what is staring us in the face, and that is why all privately owned guns MUST BE CONFISCATED, You are about to be severely culled. The formula is :-

Deliberately induced poverty PLUS no rights MINUS guns EQUALS helplessness.

You don't believe it? neither did the European Jews when those who had escaped the death camps came back to warn their brothers. Indeed they threw stones at the messengers, but they went through the gas chambers all the same.

Kindest regards,

George Brown

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir

I want to keep my rifle! I want to maintain the right to keep my rifle in my home, and to take it to the range when I want to without getting the permission of some petty official to do so.

Unfortunately other shooters are letting me down. They can't be bothered lobbying politicians, explaining to other people why we shooters take certain views, and can't be bothered supporting pro-gun candidates at election time.

More frightening in recent times I have had certain shooters tell me that registration is a good thing or that you should be forced to join a club if you want to own a rifle. These misfits, and I make no apology for using this term are a major threat to the true shooter who prize their liberty and the liberty of their fellow citizen; as opposed to those who swallow up and conform to comfortable, cliched views so rudely thrust upon us by politicians, the media, lefties, and other assorted trash.

The reason these traitorous shooters want these restrictions imposed is power. Due to a deficiency of character they would love to be in a position of power to dictate who could use a range, whom should be deemed to be a bona fide collector or who should be privileged enough to sit a compulsory safety test before a shooters license is issued.

I say enough is enough! I will lick no one's boots to possess what by all standards of natural justice and liberty must already be mine. Decent upstanding people must be prepared to make a stand to not only retain but regain the rights our forefathers had.

Let people who prize what is true and right gather, bound by a united purpose and determination to maintain and nurture what is good and responsible.

For those who care and are prepared to do something, the answer is to join an organisation of activist shooters such as the Firearms Owners Association and don't let the sycophants trade off your rights for financial gain and total power over the sport.

Keep it Up!

Paul

Tamworth, NSW

Dear Jimi,

Saw your blurb in the media, and make a promise to get in contact, and then your magazine arrived, and after the tame approach taken by the Sporting Shooters (SSAA), yours was a refreshing experience.

You tackle the big issues ... the Sporting Shooters are caught in a time warp earlier this century when firearms ownership was a right ... and the gun grabbers were still underground.

I'm happy to exchange editorial comment.

But to help you out, find enclosed $15 to help fund my sub.

Keep up the good work.

preventive and enforcement action.

The United Nations is unquestionably sovereign on matters of peace and security (chapters 5-8) and on other matters of global significance such as health, cultural and educational co-operation and human rights (chapters 9-11). Population, the environment and development can of course only be handled at global level.

Read article 13. Under it the General Assembly is legislating apace, and its Resolutions are a triumph of law-making. Under articles 10-14 the Assembly makes "recommendations." But recommendations of a global forum possess the great, inherent authority of natural law. Nations generally comply with them, and that compliance amounts to the habitual obedience of the bulk of the people. The United Nations is not a foreign affair; and national policies now increasingly derive their legitimacy from the United Nations.

UN structure and authority are democratic and responsive; the world government is not perfect, but it is adequate and we are improving it. It is worth our loyalty.

brings choice speakers out to Australia, most likely with government money, such as professor Lawniczak, Vice-President of the World Federation of United Nations Associations, and works in the Economics Department Centre for Soviet and Eastern Studies.

The United Nations which Stanley wants us to give loyalty to is full of these Communist Bureaucrats as internationalism and communism were tied to together before Karl Marx initiated the first Communist International. Marx prided himself on his internationalism; the proletariat by definition have no property, therefore they have no country. All struggles have to be class struggles, he said.

As a matter of interest, the names of the Security Council heads of the United Nations since 1945 are in chronological order: Comrades Sobolev, Zinchenko, Tcherchev, Protich, Dobrynin, Arkadev, Kisikev, Suslov, Nesterenko, Kutakov, Schevehenko, Sytenko, Ustinov, and Safromchuk. All but Comrade Protich [a Yugoslav] were Soviets. Comrade Safromchuk probably retired on 31/12/91. His successor is not known. (Thanks to Dan McSweeney of Kilcoy, Q, for this info on the U.N.).

Stanley Johnston omits to mention who the power is behind the United Nations, a simple question to ask any U.N. supporter, or Labor or Liberal politician who supposedly should know who they owe allegiance to, is: "Can you name one Secretary-General of the U.N. who has not been appointed on the recommendation of the Security Council?" And, "Can you name one head of the Security Council who has not been a Communist?"

The United Nations has offered us their "Bill of Rights". The reality is the abolition of inalienable commonlaw rights.

The United Nations calls it "security and freedom." The reality for our world is "peril and slavery" at best.

We have to remember Mr Winston Churchill's words;
"Never, never, never, never give up".

CARTRIDGE COLLECTABLES

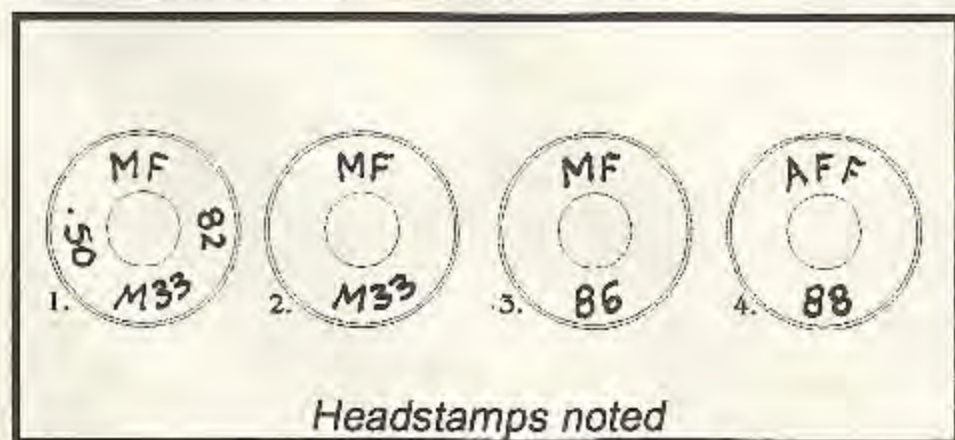

AUSTRALIAN 50 BMG

I'm sure that everyone out there is familiar with Australian military ammunition in calibres such as 7.62 (308 Win), 303, 9mm and even 5.56mm (223 Rem). It may come as a surprise to many of you that the Footscray factory has been producing 50 BMG (Browning Machine Gun) cartridges for the past ten years.

1994 will see the end of an era when the Footscray plant will be shifted to Benalla after 104 years of continual production. John Whitney of New Zealand's Colonial Ammunition Co established the factory in 1890, and it was ultimately leased by the Australian Federal Government in 1920, then bought in 1927 for 150,000 pounds.

This ammunition was used in action in the Gulf War on Australian ships; shots were fired across the bows of freighters during the UN embargo of shipping to Iraq. The order was hurried to such an extent that a new bunter for the year of manufacture was not struck, and subsequent batches have all used cases dated 1989.

The 50 BMG is probably the largest cartridge you could ever want to fire from the shoulder. I can say that the concussion was most memorable, and repeat firing would definitely result in a bad headache and/or a blood nose. Thankfully the rifle had a very effective muzzle break, and yes, I was wearing ear plugs AND muffs. Pushing a 750 grain projectile out at around 2650 fps its energy figures are awesome, but of course a rifle that weighs 15kg has no practical hunting applications.

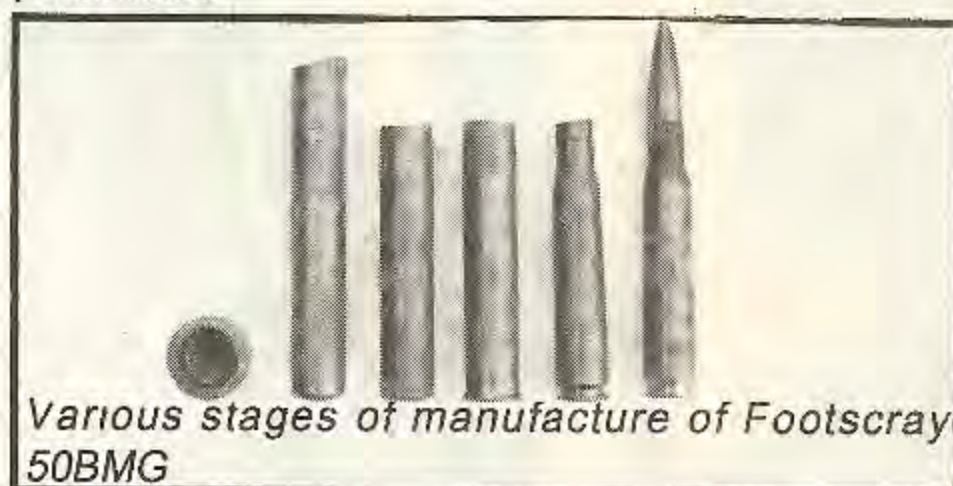

Headstamp examples shown start with pre-production batches (#1 & #2). Some of these were sent to France for testing. While no dated cases have been noted from 1983, the format style for ball ammunition remained unchanged from 1984-87 (#3). All subsequent batches have used style #4, dated 1988 and 1989. Factory dummies were produced with no powder or primer, some for samples at the Australian Defence Expo (November 1989), others as action-proving dummies.

While Footscray have never manufactured anything but ball projectiles, American black tipped armour piercing bullets have been loaded and used in their cartridges. Early production (up to 1986) used Dynamit Nobel nickel primers, while subsequent batches used a brass-coloured primer of Israeli manufacture.

With Government policy of keeping "dangerous" toys out of reach of us children these cartridges are quite uncommon, considering they are in current production.

They were joined by H.G. Wells, who added a brilliant mind to their intelligentsia conspiracy, although there was a conflict of personalities with Sydney Webb on strategy. They skilfully planned to use "education" to destroy the free enterprise system. Firstly by educating teachers, lecturers, journalists and politicians then successive generations of children would be "moulded". Every popular idea, every twist of carefully researched mass psychology was employed; people were to be seduced rather than led down the Communist road.

H.G.Wells wrote, "Until some common political control dominates the earth to avoid the positive evils of war and to attain the new levels of prosperity and power, an effective world control, not merely of armed forces but of the production and main movements of staple commodities and the drift and expansion of population is required."

Written eighty years ago Wells sets the scene for one world government, control of armed forces, world wealth and the limiting or restriction of child birth on a world scale.

In the "great deceit" social pseudo-sciences by the Veritas Foundation they say:

"The octopus of Fabian socialism stretches from England to the United States, with tentacles in Canada, New Zealand, Australia and other parts of the British Empire. The methods are devious, underhanded and fraught with deception, but they work. Fabian socialist propaganda is filled with charges of cheating, dishonesty and conspiracy on the part of what they brand as the 'capitalist system'. In fact it is their own method of deception and patent dishonesty that are regularly planned and carried out and deliberately concealed."

This is the same method used by both Hitler and Soviets to accuse their intended victims of the crimes which they were plotting to use on them. The Fabians political policy operates on a permanent basis of fraud to soften up and subvert our society so that it will eventually fall like ripe fruit into the hands of this self-appointed socialist elite.

Annie Besant, 1847-1933. Fabian, President of Theosophical Society, the inspiration to Hitler.

The Fabian Sir Oswald Mosely and his wife Cynthia Curzon who started the National Socialists of Great Britain [Nazi] Party and George Bernard Shaw were ardent admirers of Hitler and Stalin and they opposed and succeeded in blocking the re-arming bills in the British parliament

There exists only one reason to enact gun registration laws. Only registration makes confiscation feasible.

Confiscation of firearms in any country can be effected by a benevolent government, or by a malevolent government such as a foreign invader or a government controlled by foreign powers. We are a defeated people, defeated from within. Denmark was occupied by the Germans on April 9th, 1940. Pressure was put on the Danish Government by the Gestapo for complete registration of firearms immediately. Ten weeks later, pressure was brought on the Danish Government to confiscate and so the Danes were disarmed by their own government. Danish police collected those guns and they were deposited in a prison at Nyborg. Some were retained by the Germans and the rest were melted down.

A few points: 1/ Never register; 2/ It's nearly always your own government controlled from without that does the job; 3/ Don't ever say there are too many, where would they store them? Remember, they will find the room, and railway iron and smoke do not take up much real estate.

Registration

If dire circumstances cause you to register your firearm, remember to cause them as many problems as possible. The more over-worked the system the less inclined, as time is always a factor, to confiscate. If your rifle is a .243 Win tell the man it's a 6mm. It is not telling lies and they are not experts anyway. If you have a 303 Lee Enfield, tell him you have a 7.7x54 Lithgow Number One, Mark Three, Pattern Two; if a Swedish Mauser, put that down as a .264 Carl Gustav Model Ninety Six. Use as many computer memory bytes up as possible and cause the maximum amount of sorting time. Make as many changes as possible in characterising your firearm so it slows down their grouping process.

Retail tax

We have just received a booklet from the Sales Tax Department concerning changes to the tax laws. Apparently all shops, small businesses and farms have to apply for a Sales Tax Exemption Number, similar to the one that wholesalers use now. The only logical reason for this is so the retailers can charge a point of sale tax. Now either the Sales Tax Department knows something we don't and Hewson is going to be elected and implement G.S.T. Or like the Australia Card, whatever happens, it's going to be introduced anyway. Even a fat little black dog like me can wonder if that is the case why is it an issue when both dogs want the same bone?

Hello. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I am the Chief Elder of the Makka Tribe. We are a large tribe of Queensland Aborigines. We are also a white tribe.

The dictionary defines an aborigine as an original inhabitant, and we have the paperwork to prove that we were amongst the first in this state. We have birth, death and marriage certificates going back six generations, and copies of shipping manifestos which prove when and how our ancestors arrived in this land.

I would think that there are many other white tribes in this state that have similar documentation. Some of my people have a long history of periodic occupation of Fraser Island. We have used it for traditional hunting and fishing expeditions for many decades and we believe our spiritual ancestor "MUIA" to be on that island. Because of our strong ties to this island we have lodged a land rights claim for most of the island. See Queensland Hansard page 2838 of 13-11-91, and Post Magazine 12-12-92.

As you know other Aboriginal tribes are claiming large areas of Queensland's National Parks, and are gaining freehold title to some of them. For any other tribe to be given land ahead of the Makkas I feel they should provide the same documentation as us, particularly how their ancestors came to Australia. For all we know they could have slipped across from New Guinea in canoes as illegal immigrants and are now claiming land without proof of entry.

As you know, the Queensland Government has opened up National Parks and road closures for land rights claims. They have also introduced the Anti Discrimination Act, which makes it illegal to discriminate against anyone on the basis of skin colour. This makes all Australians equal under Queensland and International Law, and skin colour is no bar to land rights claims. As black Aborigines now control approximately 3,000 acres per head of population, it's about time white Australians got in on the claims band wagon.

The Makka Tribe have produced a land claim kit to assist other tribes to claim land. It contains all necessary forms and documents to claim your own piece of Queensland's National Parks, plus helpful hints to deal with reluctant government departments. If you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: F.O.A.A., P.O.Box 849, Nambour Q4560. We will rush out your claim kit and you too can have your own homeland in Queensland.

I.McNiven, Chief Elder, Makka Tribe.

Thank you for all the letters you have sent me. Keep them coming please. I have published a selection this month and if yours hasn't appeared maybe we'll have room next month.

OWEN INC CO

12Ga 5-shot pump action shotgun.

The HL-102 was derived from the Ithaca Mod 37; one of the most popular pump actions in America over the past forty years.

Also used extensively by the U.S. Forces, it had a reputation for excellent reliability and safety, partly due to its bottom ejection, which does not expose left-handed shooters to an open side port.

MODEL HL-102 HAS 30" BARREL WITH 4 INTERCHANGABLE SCREW-IN CHOKES (F,IM,M,IC).

MODEL HL-102A HAS 20" CYLINDER-BORE BARREL.
